IMPRESSIVE SCENE AS CONFERENCE IS OPENED

DELEGATES AT LONDON HEAR KING

His Majesty Formally Opens Naval Conference of Powers With Speech of Hearty Welcome

RELIEF IS NEEDED FROM GREAT LOAD

While Nations Are All Proud of Navies There Is Danger in Present Trend to Competition

LONDON, Jan. 21.—His Majesty the King formally opened the five-power naval conference this forenoon with a six-minute speech broadcast over a world-wide radio hook up. He pledged Great Britain's co-operation in the conference effort to limit navies and expressed a hope that an agreement would be reached which would prepare the way for a general disarmament treaty.

It was His Majesty's first public appearance since his illness of last year. His face was ruddy, his step firm, his voice rich and full of confidence—loud enough to carry even to the corridors outside the gallery of the House of Lords where the delegates and a few invited guests convened. The following is the text of the speech:

THE KING'S SPEECH
"It is with sincere satisfaction that I am present here to welcome the delegates of the five principal naval powers assembled for the object of eliminating the evil results of wasteful naval armaments. Every nation represented here is proud of its navy, proud of that navy's past achievements and its tradition. It is not the fault of these traditions nor of our navies. It is the competition due to the supposed necessity which has led to a feeling of insecurity between nations and even to the risk of war."

"Since the Great War all of us have determined to leave nothing undone to prevent a repetition of that grim and immense tragedy. We are seeking to bring about agreement between maritime nations on the limitation of naval armaments and bring the reduction to a point consistent with national security."

SUPREMACY DIFFICULTY
"This limitation of naval armaments has in the past proved a matter of supreme difficulty. A Continued on Page 2, Column 4

GOLD SEARCH STOPPED AS BARGE SINKS

Much Valuable Equipment Is Lost and Work Suspended for Indefinite Period

SCOW OVERTURNS WHEN GALE RAGES

JUNEAU, Alaska, Jan. 21.—Loss of all diving equipment in a storm, which overturned their barge at the scene of the wreck of the steamer Islander, at the south end of Douglas Island last week, today caused the limitation of naval armaments and bring the reduction to a point consistent with national security.

Two slinging cranes, two hoisting booms, a gasoline hoist and two diving cages or bells were lost when the barge was overturned by the gale, and sank in about 400 feet of water on January 14.

Mr. C. H. Wiley, Olympia, who manufactured the special diving equipment for deep water work used at the Islander, said it would take until next summer before the lost articles, valued at about $20,000, could be replaced. Efforts were made tomorrow to salvage the barge, but little hope was held that any of the equipment could be brought to the surface. The men will wait for Seattle soon.

The Wiley's started operations last summer in an attempt to bring to the surface the safe of the Islander, said to have contained approximately $350,000 in gold when the steamer sunk.

Liberal Nominee In Bagot Riding Is Mr. Dumaine

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—Mr. Cyril Dumaine was today chosen to represent the Liberal Party in Bagot County in the Federal by-election made necessary by the death of the late Mr. Doreen G. Morin, M.P. Mr. Dumaine was elected by a slim majority on the fourth ballot. Five candidates were nominated under the leadership of Hon. Fernand Rinfret, Secretary of State.

At a representative meeting of Conservatives of Chateauguay-Huntingdon today it was decided to send a delegation to Montreal on Thursday to discuss with the provincial organizer the problem of the naming of a candidate in opposition to Mr. D. J. O'Connor, chosen yesterday as Liberal candidate at the by-election to be held on February 3. This constituency was left vacant on the death of Hon. J. A. Robb, former Minister of Finance.

Liberal Group In Manitoba to Get New Leader

WINNIPEG, Jan. 21.—Mr. J. W. Breakey, Liberal member for Glenwood, will be leader of the Liberal group in the Manitoba Legislature this session in succession to Mr. H. A. Robson, K.C., who recently resigned his seat in the House on his elevation to the Manitoba Court of Appeal. Following the formal opening of the Legislature by Lieutenant-Governor James D. McGregor this afternoon, the Liberals met in caucus and elected Mr. Breakey as their House leader.

Mr. Breakey has been a member of the Legislature for many years, first being elected in 1914, and has always taken a foremost part in the affairs of the Liberal party in Manitoba.

TRADE PACT CONDEMNED BY FARMERS

Alberta Agriculturists Pass Resolution Calling for Repudiation of Australian Treaty

DISCRIMINATORY SAY DELEGATES

Declare It Gives Special Consideration to Industries at Expense of Farmers' Interests

CALGARY, Jan. 21.—Alterations in existing tariff schedules are to be requested by Alberta's farmers. The board of directors of the United Farmers of Alberta was instructed at the opening of the twenty-second annual convention today to request renunciation of the Australian trade treaty of 1925; immediate, substantial increase in British preference and reduction in the tariff on automobiles and trucks.

Plea for renunciation of the Australian treaty by the Dominion Government was based on the claim that the pact is discriminatory—showing special consideration to industries at the expense of Canadian agriculture. It pointed out that Canada reduced its tariff schedule on certain agricultural products, while Australia's part of the agreement involved tariff cuts relating only to industrial goods.

BRITISH PREFERENCE
In requesting increased British preference, the Alberta farm body lined up beside the United Farmers of Manitoba, who passed a parallel resolution in convention two weeks ago. Mr. Robert Gardiner, M.P., supporting the resolution, labeled a preference increase as far better than tariff retaliation against the United States as proposed by high protectionists. Retaliation would mean higher prices, he held, but increased British preference would mean lower prices as well as assistance in reducing British unemployment.

Automobiles and trucks have become necessities on the farm, according to the resolution, passed unanimously, which requested tariff on these items should be reduced to the average level of the tariff on agricultural machinery.

PREMIER SPEAKS
Alberta is looking ahead to a new decade of progress, said Premier J. E. Brownlee today, at the opening session Four hundred delegates were present at the opening of the meeting, and their number was expected to increase.

RECEIVE EGGS FROM ISLAND

B.C. EGG POOL HAS ESTABLISHED RECEIVING STATIONS HERE AND AT DUNCAN

Will Be Three Centres on Island to Serve Leading Poultrymen

The development of the egg pool business on Vancouver Island is instigated again by the commencement of two additional receiving stations for eggs, for the district around Victoria and the Cowichan Valley, located respectively at the yards, Store Street, and at Duncan, both with truckage to the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway.

With a station already established at Nanaimo, to serve the important egg-supplying districts of Parksville and Qualicum Beach, the B.C. Egg Pool is in an increasingly improved position to serve members of the pool.

This pool is now so closely linked with the marketing facilities on the Prairies that its future appears to be secure.

There has been a steady increase in the number of eggs handled by the pool, and by a leading commercial house, from Vancouver Island poultrymen, the quality receiving the high praise of Eastern purchasers.

CHICKENS BURNED IN FIRE AT FARM

NEW WESTMINSTER, Jan. 21.—A fire of unknown origin on Monday afternoon destroyed 1,000 laying pullets, valued at $1,500 and a new chickenhouse, valued at $2,000, on the poultry ranch of Mr. George Williams, Lake Como Road, Burnhamthorpe. Thirty laying pullets and the breeding stock were saved.

Cabinet Meeting Held but Premier Declines to Talk

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—No announcements followed today's meeting of the Cabinet. The Ministers were in conference from 2:30 until 6 o'clock, but Premier MacKenzie King had nothing to announce at the conclusion of the meeting.

MONEY GRANTS TO PROVINCES QUITE LEGAL

Hon. Mr. Bennett Makes Onslaught on King Government for Attitude Towards Such Requests

LIBERALS VOTED AGAINST HIGHWAY

REGINA, Jan. 21.—Speaking in the Armories here tonight, Hon. R. B. Bennett delivered the Conservative speech in Saskatchewan of his tour. The remarks of the Conservative chief were preceded by a short speech by Senator W. B. Willoughby, Opposition leader in the Senate.

For the new principle of the Liberal Government that it was improper for the Dominion to make money grants to the provinces, Mr. Bennett had caustic references. "It is not a new principle," he exclaimed, "to grant money by the Dominion to the provinces. The basis of Confederation was a per capita subsidy from the Dominion to the provinces."

Mr. Bennett went on to say that it was not right "for your Prime Minister to use catch phrases and seek votes for old age pensions, in which the Dominion is to contribute on an equal basis with the provinces, and then afterwards denounce the Dominion grant as a vicious principle."

Between the time that Premier King had sought votes through old age pensions, in 1926, and his denunciation of this principle, the Conservative leader went on, practically every province in the Dominion had entered into the scheme. Touching upon national highways, Mr. Bennett recalled that the Conservative party had moved an amendment for Dominion grants towards this essential project, "but," he continued, "Mr. Dunning, the Minister of Finance, voted against it, and every Liberal member in the House voted against it. Why? Because the Prime Minister snapped the party whip and the Liberal members voted against it."

highway which we should have from coast to coast."

Man's Body Is Hook-Up For Speech

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—His arms twitching with shocks from electric current, Harold Vivian, a young radio engineer, idly placed with his body a hook-up link in the vast hook-up and made it possible for listeners-in of fifty-nine North American radio stations to hear the King's speech at the naval conference today.

Just before the King began, somebody in the control room of the broadcasting company tripped over the wires to the generator. Vivian grasped the wires together in his hands, to restore the circuit. Leakage of current through his body to the floor shook his arms with spasms and he held on without a break for twenty minutes until new wires could be connected.

UP ABOUT FIVE

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—Premier MacKenzie King was up soon after 5 o'clock this morning to hear the radio broadcast of the ceremonies opening the London Naval Conference.

Subject of Freedom of Seas Raised In British House of Commons

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The subject which held the attention of the world centered on the Royal Gallery this morning—naval disarmament—was carried over into the House of Commons, also in Westminster, when it resumed its sessions after the Christmas holidays.

The question was put: "Whether any, and if so, what steps were being taken to consider, either in conjunction with America or not, how far this country can accept the freedom of the seas?"

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald returned the written reply: "While His Majesty's Government is not in communication with the question under consideration."

Further asked if the question of freedom of the seas had been raised at the Naval Conference, Mr. MacDonald answered in the negative.

Statesmen Create Flurry

BRITISH political circles buzzed with excitement recently when Viscount Grey of Fallodon, right, assailed Lloyd George's leadership, left, and delivered a solemn warning on behalf of the Asquith Liberals. Viscount Grey's speech was filled with dynamite and had the effect of ending the truce which carried the British Liberal party outwardly united—through the last election. The cause of the trouble, as in former years, is the "Lloyd George fund," especially the recent replenishment of the Liberal headquarters fund by the Lloyd George fund.

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 21.—Multinational color floods the great hotels of London. The Occident and the Orient meet in such a spectacle of variegation and animation as seldom has been seen in even this familiar assembling ground of the races. And over it all appears to hover an extraordinary spirit of buoyancy and good fellowship—a spirit which seems to say, "the world really is drawing closer together; the plague of inter-racial and international suspicion and antipathy actually is dying out."

GOVERNMENT WINS FIGHT AT HALIFAX

Member of Administration Without Portfolio Gathers Large Majority Over Liberal Opponent

LEADING LIBERAL BY 4,300 VOTES

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 21.—Dr. G. E. Murphy, member of the Government without portfolio, was elected by a large majority over his Liberal opponent, Mr. R. E. Finn, K.C., in the by-election held in the city and county of Halifax today to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. John Mahoney, Minister of Natural Resources.

Dr. Murphy assumed the lead when the counting of ballots began, and steadily added to his majority. With three-quarters of the polls heard from, he was leading by 4,300 votes.

The result insures the retention of the Government's majority of three in the House of Assembly.

Propose Lining Rights of Way With Mammoths

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—An outdoor museum extending along the rights of way of railway lines in Western Canada, on which concrete casts of the skeletons of dinosaurs, mammoths and mastodons would stand, has been suggested by a member of the National Museum staff here.

The creation of such an outdoor museum would serve as a monument to the strange beasts which roamed parts of Canada millions of years ago, the official thinks; and would be unique as an attraction to tourists traveling the railways.

Sea Burial for Radio Operator Of C.P.R. Ship

VANCOUVER, Jan. 21.—Mr. William George Tricker, aged forty-four, veteran wireless operator of this Coast, died at his home last evening. The deceased made 120 crossings of the Pacific as No. 1 radio officer on the Empress of Russia, and served on that ship during his wartime activities. He also served on other ships on the Pacific, and for several years was wireless operator at the Vancouver Merchants' Exchange.

Mr. Tricker had been ill for nearly three months. At his own request, voiced five minutes before he died, he was returned to the sea which he loved.

Powers Start Study Of Naval Questions At Historic Parley

Royal Gallery Witnesses Commencement of One of Greatest Events in History of World—Representatives of Five Great Nations Meet to Discuss How Best to Promote World Peace

King Grooms Delegates in Address of Strong Hopes

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Launched by King George in the Royal Gallery of the House of Lords, the Five-Power Naval Disarmament Conference became a reality. Swiftly following on the inaugural plenary session, the American, British, French, Italian and Japanese delegates bent themselves again to the study and solution of the difficult tasks before them and to continue their work until next midnight.

The exchange of national views on naval affairs will be emphasized tomorrow, and then on Thursday morning the delegates will re-assemble at St. James Palace in the first of many private meetings to elaborate a new international treaty to have for its object reducing or limiting fleets and guaranteeing the peace and security of mankind.

BUILDINGS TO RISE IN CITY SOON

Several Large Projects Will Absorb Labor in Construction Trades When Weather Moderates

CHANGING FACE OF HUMBOLDT ST.

While the continued cold weather has considerably delayed construction operations, the building programme for 1930 is gradually taking shape. After the abnormal volume of last year, created by the extension of hotel and hospital accommodation, it was not to be expected that the figures would start off so liberally, but there are several major projects contemplated which should keep business brisk.

The largest will be the power house and laundry for the Empress Hotel, upon which work has already started. Next in importance downtown will be the Canadian National Railway wharf and approaches. The S. S. Kresge & Company building is to be erected at the northeast corner of Douglas and Fort Streets shortly, as soon as the tenancies now held in buildings on the site have expired. The Imperial Oil Company has plans for a combined super-service station on the site opposite the Postoffice, Humboldt Street, overlooking the harbor.

Apartment houses are all downtown locations assured of construction, apart from a number of apartment houses actually started or under construction in various parts of the city, one of the largest schemes has not yet gone beyond the stage of a project, and that is the proposed new Court House, for which an appropriation is expected in the next Provincial estimates.

Church building projects include accommodation for the First Baptist Church and the Salvation Army's new edifice. St. John's has a project for a church hall and the Reformed Episcopal Church hall is already started as a memorial to Bishop Cridge.

Remodelling of the premises on the northwest corner of Broughton and Broad Streets is one of the chief changes expected in downtown business property during the present year. Construction on Fort Street, which is gradually being rebuilt east of Douglas Street, has also been announced.

TRAIN DERAILED NEAR REVELSTOKE

VANCOUVER, Jan. 21.—Word was received at the Canadian Pacific Railway offices here today that one engine and twelve freight cars, proceeding to Revelstoke, were derailed about noon in Laurie tunnel, which is about twenty miles west of Glacier. There were no injuries, and auxiliaries were immediately dispatched to the scene from Calgary and Revelstoke.

Relief From Wind To Be Shortlived Says Observer

THE temperature yesterday ranged over ten degrees, the minimum being twenty-five, according to the readings at Gonzales Observatory. The freedom from wind during the past few days has been a pleasure, but it will be shortlived if the forecast of fresh to strong north and east winds is correct. Milder weather is expected with sleet and snow.

Immediate Jail Delivery at Oakalla Appears Improbable for Fanatics

REFUSE TO GIVE GUARANTEES

The hope that the Doukhobors now in jail at Oakalla in a body may be ready to agree to conform to the laws of the country and return to their homes without any further nude parades, is not likely to be immediately attainable. A short time ago it appeared to be quite within the range of possibility that there might be such a general jail delivery, but just at the present time this happy solution does not seem so near. The Government of the province, with the consent of the Dominion Department of Justice, is agreeable whenever the Doukhobors express a readiness to behave, and their friends will pay the transportation to their homes, and undertake that no further acts of indecency will follow, to allow these people their liberty.

Until this assurance is forthcoming there is no chance of letting them out of jail.

A move in the direction of removal from Oakalla on the conditions laid down was in sight a few days ago. A change, however, appears to have come over the scene, and now it seems uncertain that liberty can be permitted these people as they are not prepared to give assurances that they will behave themselves and conform to the practices observed by residents of the country.

VANCOUVER ISLAND FINDS PUBLICITY IN HOTEL JOURNAL

The Hotel News, described as the official organ of the Hotel Association in Canada, publishes an item of considerable interest to the people of Victoria in this month's issue. This is an article entitled "Come and Discover Vancouver Island," from the pen of Mr. Frank Gilmora, publicity writer of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau.

The article, which is given prominent space in the journal, includes four photographs. One of these shows a view from the north end of the Causeway, looking south; one shows a catch of fish, taken in these waters; one shows a delightful view of Cadboro Bay beach, while the fourth gives the approach to the seventh green of the Macaulay Point Golf Course.

Toronto Broker Held on Charge Of Conspiracy

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—Mr. William J. Smart, president of the Homer L. Gibson & Company, Limited, local business concern, was arrested this evening on instructions of the Ontario attorney-general's department. It is understood the charge was one of conspiracy. Smart was taken to Court Street Police Station while an effort was being made to raise bail of $100,000. Homer Gibson & Company have been operating in Toronto and other Ontario cities and deals chiefly in mining securities. The company has a seat on the Standard Mining Exchange.

CONCERTS NOT SUFFICIENTLY APPRECIATED

Excellent Programme by Local Artists in Danger of Passing Unnoticed at Present Time

FINE PROGRAMMES ARE BEING OFFERED

With the establishment of two stock companies and of four "talkies" in this city, Victoria audiences might well be expected to be carried off their feet.

It is possible, therefore, that this ebullition of attractions, combined with the recent unfavorable weather, may have had something to do with the feeble attendance at the first two of the series of concerts which have been presented at the Crystal Garden by the tourist trade group of the Chamber of Commerce.

EXCELLENT PROGRAMMES

Last night's performance, played to an audience which was completely insufficient from the point of view of the performers, and also of the Tourist Trade Group, still found the appreciation which it deserved, and reflected great credit upon those who were responsible for the production. Composed entirely of local talent, and augmented by the Crystal Garden Orchestra, last night's programme was as follows:

Piano duet, "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" (Beech-Li-Li, Desmond and Brian Burdon-Murphy); vocal duet, "Crookit Bawbee" (Anon.); Miss Marjorie Watson and Mr. W. C. Fyfe; vocal solo, (a) "Watchman" (Squire), (b) "Will-o'-the-Wisp" (Cherry); Mr. Maudwyn Humphreys; vocal solo, (a) "Could My Song With Birds Be Vying" (Hahn), (b) "Broken Song" (Kopp); Miss Dorothy Hartree; vocal solo, (a) "Andante Tranquille" (Op. 25) (de Beriot), (b) "Serenade" (Herbert); Mr. George Tate, and vocal solo, (a) "Break Day" (Sanderson), (b) "Mandy" (Tombs); Miss Marjorie Watson.

Sacrifices in Empire Policy Of Free Trade

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—Sir John Aird, president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and envoy to the Pacific Relations Conference, returned here last night after a four months' trip to Europe, the Orient, France and Great Britain. He remarked that sacrifices must be made by all the component parts of the British Empire if the goal of intra-empire trade is to be realized.

Trade between the Orient and Canada should be greatly stimulated and be equally beneficial. As a result of the Pacific Relations Conference, China and Japan were near an amicable understanding of their difficulties in Manchuria; Great Britain must retain a great commercial fleet. These were some of the convictions expressed by Sir John on his arrival here.

Trade between Canada and Japan and China has grown steadily for the past few years," he said.

"The result has been mutually beneficial. Japan is regarded highly as a wheat consuming country, and our produce is regarded highly in both Japan and China. Japan is also a good market for machinery and clothing."

Secretary Stimson, following Mr. MacDonald, spoke in the same spirit holding that the goal of disarmament could only be reached by successive stages with frequent revisions.

Premier Tardieu of France, after declaring that "success in this limited enterprise would make possible success in our whole effort toward disarmament," pointed out that "failure would mean that we would be burdened with a limitless mortgage."

Former Premier Wakatsuki of Japan and Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy brought the earnest support of their countries to the cause of disarmament.

Then, after Prime Minister MacDonald had announced that the conference would reassemble on Thursday "in committee" at St. James' Palace, the assembly rose and streamed out of the Royal Gallery into the thickness of a traditional London fog. As they went, the statue of Cromwell, a Bible in his left hand and a drawn sword in his right, stood like a ghostly figure in front of the old hall of William Rufus.

London welcomed the conference with one of its famous fogs, a swirling, eddying mist that threatened to mar the ceremonial, but in the end only lent a characteristic English touch to the proceedings.

King George, in morning dress and solitary dignity, arrived at Westminster from Buckingham Palace only a few minutes later. The splendor of a Royal trip to Westminster was wholly lacking. So thick was the fog at 11 a.m. that the "Bobbies" of the Metropolitan Police had to use handlights in guiding the Royal limousine to the Royal entrance of the House of Lords.

great success was achieved in the conclusion of the Washington Treaty in 1922, imposing certain limitations on construction of ships, but hitherto all efforts to advance beyond that point has failed.

"I believe that you to whom your Governments have entrusted the high office of continuing the task at Washington have the single-minded intention of proceeding, not with any selfish and exclusively nationalistic purpose, but with this noble inspiration and resolve to remove once and for all this particular obstacle from the path of order and civilized progress."

"All nations have varying needs and need special consideration, but if each is equally determined to make some sacrifice as a contribution to the general good, your deliberations will be a great and lasting benefit, not only to the country which you represent, but upon mankind generally."

LIGHTENING THE BURDEN

"I earnestly trust that this Conference will lead to immediate alleviation of the heavy burden now weighing upon the peoples of the world, and also by facilitating the work of the preparatory commission on disarmament and hasten the time when a general disarmament conference can deal with this problem in an even more comprehensive manner. In this hope I shall follow your deliberations with the closest interest and attention."

pany awaited the Royal voice. It came strong and clear. No trace of weakness was in the resonant tones, but there were without eccentricities of accent.

As he voiced the high idealism which had called the nations together in the cause of disarmament, the silver microphone picked up the words and flung them across oceans and continents to a hundred million listeners in the far corners of the world, probably the greatest audience that any man in history has ever had.

Outside the fog had cleared a little, but wisps came through the holes in the lead glass windows high in the wall. These holes were made by the bullets of German air raiders during the world war and have been left to show the damage done at the time of Westminster.

After translation of the Royal speech and the departure of the King, Mr. MacDonald, who had sat behind the throne, slipped into position at the centre of the group of delegates.

NO SENSATIONAL POLICIES

After the departure of the King, there followed a long series of addresses and translations. Sensational declarations of policy were not expected and none were made.

For Premier MacDonald it was a great moment, perhaps the climax of his career. To reduce the British Navy, he challenges the greatest tradition of his country, but success in international affairs would likely mean renewed Labor victories at home.

urgate a chain of events traveling straight toward the permanent peace of the world.

Saving of money, it might be supposed, would appeal tellingly to these war-burdened British. Economy they undoubtedly want. They want it as much as they need it. They regard unjustified expenditures for armaments as having the character of a double crime—a crime against the material welfare of the peoples, and the worse crime of radical moral injury to civilization. But it is not money one finds flurging in the uppermost thoughts of the British masses with reference to the Naval Conference. What they ask you is, "Do you think the conference will get us any nearer to peace?"

The Police Commission estimates have been given a preliminary review by members of the body, and at a meeting to be held tomorrow in Mayor Anson's office the board, it is expected, will complete its budget.

pected to exceed 500 before the close of the first day.

Advances in transportation, marketing organization and public health have marked the past few years, Mr. Brownlee stated. With the province expending $2,000 or $3,000 daily for unemployment relief, Mr. Brownlee considered it advisable to consider the general situation over a decade past rather than during a difficult year immediately gone.

"We have no fear for the future," he said, in testimony to the era of progress ahead for Alberta.

In his opening address Lieut.-Governor W. Egbert commented on the achievement of the Canadian Wheat Pool in attracting attention of the world by its co-operative marketing success. He complimented the Government of Alberta on the sale of its railways and the recovery of its natural resources.

Mayor A. Davidson, of Calgary, offered greetings to the delegates.

Plasterer Possesses Valuable Collection of Rare Books and Autographs—Not for Sale

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Tom Conolly is just a common plasterer, putting around the Auditorium Theatre, but at night he is the greatest Englishman in the world. He is the Englishman in the far corners of the world, probably the greatest audience that any man in history has ever had.

Outside the fog had cleared a little, but wisps came through the holes in the lead glass windows high in the wall. These holes were made by the bullets of German air raiders during the world war and have been left to show the damage done at the time of Westminster.

After translation of the Royal speech and the departure of the King, Mr. MacDonald, who had sat behind the throne, slipped into position at the centre of the group of delegates.

NO SENSATIONAL POLICIES

After the departure of the King, there followed a long series of addresses and translations. Sensational declarations of policy were not expected and none were made.

For Premier MacDonald it was a great moment, perhaps the climax of his career. To reduce the British Navy, he challenges the greatest tradition of his country, but success in international affairs would likely mean renewed Labor victories at home.

Do Your Knees Swell? Are Your Joints Sore?

Those who have tested out numerous liniments will agree that where something is needed to dislodge a deep-seated, more or less chronic condition, nothing compares with Nerville. It's because Nerville penetrates so deeply, because it has about five times the strength of the ordinary ointments, it has come to be known as King over all Pains. Conservative to Introduce First Member's Motion

LONDON, Jan. 21.—First place in the ballot for opportunity to introduce motions for discussion in the House of Commons, on Wednesday, was secured today by Mr. J. R. NATIVE SONS' GRAND FACTOR GREETED HERE

Mr. J. P. Hampton Bole, Accompanied by Grand Deputy E. G. Willard, Pays Visit to Victoria Post

ORDER ACTIVE IN EXTENSION WORK

Mr. J. P. Hampton Bole, of Vancouver, grand factor of the Native Sons of British Columbia, accompanied by Mr. Ernest G. Willard, grand deputy for Vancouver Post No. 2, paid an official visit on Monday night to Victoria Post No. 1, at a meeting held in the Sons of England Hall, Broad Street.

The Grand Post officials were warmly greeted by the members of the local post, the official welcome to them being given by Chief Factor Robert H. Hickey.

Grand Factor Bole complimented the Victoria Post for the efficient service it was rendering in promoting the welfare of British Columbia. He spoke of the growth and progress which the Native Sons of British Columbia organization had made in the province, and stated that the Grand Post of the order was very active in extension work and proposed forming twelve new posts within the next twelve months on Vancouver Island, the Mainland and the Interior of British Columbia.

At the supper which followed the business session, Grand Deputy E. G. Willard, of Vancouver, extended fraternal greetings from the members of the Vancouver Post, and assured the Victoria Post of the co-operation of the terminal city and other posts in all undertakings which have for their objective the advancement of British Columbia.

Mr. Bruce A. McKelvie, of Victoria, a past grand factor, gave an interesting discourse on the early history of British Columbia, during which he paid a tribute to the work of the pioneers.

Past Grand Factor W. H. Kinsman, on behalf of the Victoria Post, thanked Grand Factor Bole and Grand Deputy Willard for their visit and the expressions of goodwill and assistance which they offered.

PREPARE FOR CONVENTION

VICTORIA DENTAL SOCIETY NAMES COMMITTEES FOR MEETING HERE IN MAY

Clinics and Demonstrations Will Be Held in Connection With Gathering

The Victoria Dental Society at its monthly meeting last evening appointed committees in preparation for the forthcoming convention of the British Columbia Dental Association, which will be held at the Empress Hotel on Friday and Saturday, May 2 and 3 under the presidency of Dr. Frank P. Smith, of Vancouver, B.C. At this convention it is expected there will be a number of outstanding members of the dental profession represented in various clinics and demonstrations.

Entertainment features will have a prominent part including a golf tournament. The local committees appointed last evening include: Programme—Drs. W. J. Bruce, William Russell and Allan Fraser. Publicity—Drs. William Russell, W. J. Gibson and J. Calvin Foote. Transportation—Dr. E. W. Hetherington.

Entertainment—Drs. Stanley Miles, H. J. Henderson, V. P. Smith and E. H. Griffiths. Golf—Drs. A. J. Giesche and Angus McInnes.

Reception—Drs. Lewis Hall, C. B. Moss, W. W. Gunning and Alf. J. Thomas.

The officers of the Victoria Dental Society are: Dr. William J. Gibson, president; Dr. J. Calvin Foote, secretary; Dr. Art Webster, treasurer.

The executive is composed of the above officers with Drs. Gunning, Russell and Thomas.

Peggy Udell, the Ziegfeld Follies girl who is going to enter a convent, said in an interview in New York that the girls of today are all right—it is the men who are at fault.

"Cigarettes and short skirts and an occasional cocktail," Miss Udell ended, "are no more liable to make a girl stray from the straight and narrow path than long white whiskers are liable to make a man a saint."

"Most of the astronomers are now convinced that the planet of Mars is now inhabited by a race of very intelligent men. Whether they have five or six fingers is immaterial. I am satisfied that Mars is inhabited."

Dr. J. A. Pearce, of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain, said yesterday, in addressing members of the Kiwanis Club in the Empress Hotel.

Discussing Mars, Dr. Pearce said, "we are almost convinced there is life on Mars, and told of the growth and waste of snowcaps, the presence of mountains, and the daily rotation in twenty-four hours. Its seasons were twice as long as those of the Earth, because it was more distant from the sun and took two years to complete the circuit."

The speaker claimed that vegetation was certain on Mars, and the melting of the snowcaps of Mars was known to flush great areas seasonally with blue water, surging towards the equatorial zone. "If the people are there, we can be sure that there will be no question of international disputes. They must conserve their atmosphere, which is disappearing."

Dr. Pearce dealt briefly with the planets of Mercury, Jupiter, Uranus, Venus and Neptune, and presented views of star galaxies.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Dr. Pearce for his instructive address.

Raymond Ballard, a boy singer, rendered several selections which were received with applause. Mrs. Clifford Wain was the accompanist.

THE FIVE-POWER CONFERENCE

His Majesty, in the first public appearance he has made in upwards of a year and since his grave illness of over twelve months ago, was the centre of interest at the opening of the Five-Power Naval Conference in London yesterday. His speech of welcome to the delegates was in fittingly chosen words, an utterance breathing high promise and finely tempered with an appreciation of the momentous character of the occasion. The stage for the opening of the Conference was admirably set in the Royal Gallery of the House of Lords. The remaining sessions are to take place in the Palace of St. James, where the delegates will hold their first business gathering tomorrow.

What has impressed the world so far has been the earnestness with which the delegates of the Powers are approaching their task. All realize that whatever may be accomplished in a progressive way in the future, in the matter of reductions in armaments on sea, land and in the air, is dependent in large measure on the success of the present Conference. That realization will undoubtedly provide a guiding note to the deliberations, but there should not be too high hopes that the difficulties so apparent in a problem of this character can be overcome without a spirit of compromise which may grow weaker as the Conference proceeds with its duties.

There are some facts that must be borne in mind. One of these is that any change in front in the present attitude of any delegate can only be determined by consultation with the authorities of his capital. Only in the case of Great Britain is the delegate to the Five-Power Conference a minister plenipotentiary, and he is so by virtue of his office. Even Mr. Ramsay MacDonald will be in constant consultation with his Ministers, and the British Cabinet, as well as Great Britain's delegate, will have an influence on the trend of events. Another point to be considered in any estimate of the possible outcome is that the conclusions to be reached will be arrived at without relation to naval Powers which are not represented at the London gathering. It is a significant fact that all Five Powers, whose representatives are now assembled for the purpose of reaching a naval agreement, were allied together in the recent Great War. Not a single Power of those which were, during 1914-1918, in the enemy category, has been invited to London. The consequence of this cannot be estimated at the present time, but it is conceivable that resentment will arise in some chancelleries at the thought of being excluded from consultations which will aim at consolidating the peace of the world.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald in his opening address dwelt with emphasis on the need of the political security of nations in any agreement reached. Possibly he will elaborate this idea during the course of the discussions. At present the phrase is vague, for political security of the Great Powers hitherto has been dependent largely on armaments. Mr. MacDonald hopes that the outcome of the London gathering will round out a trilogy of events of which the two others are the League of Nations and the Kellogg-Briand Pact for the renunciation of war. He admits that Great Britain's beginnings and all her past have lain upon the waters, as it were; that sea power has been largely the instrument of her development and that she, above all nations, may sacrifice most in prestige and tradition by what she is prepared to do at the Conference. In this way he has sounded a note of abnegation for the country he represents, though in doing so he did not fail to draw attention to the difficulties that may arise in the definition of security in the matter of self-defence. The point of obscurity in his opening address lies in the reconciliation of the principle of self-defence with that of political security. This is the problem before the Conference that cannot be evaded. The solution depends on the readiness of all the Powers to effect compromises as to their own definitions of what national security connotes. When and if they do this there will still remain the problem of commensurate action where land and air armaments are concerned; and, related to anything and everything that may be done by these five Powers, there is the problem of the reactions to be expected from other Powers which are not being consulted.

SPROAT LAKE-TOFINO ROAD

From the standpoint of the necessary opening up of Vancouver Island through transportation methods there is no undertaking of more desirable importance than the proposed Sproat Lake-Tofino Road. When completed it will, for the first time, make Long Beach accessible by land to the populated parts of the Island. Long Beach is destined in the not distant future to become one of the main pleasure resorts of British Columbia, and possibly a magnet of attraction to visitors from many parts of the world. For the immediate future the Sproat Lake-Tofino Road has an even more important purpose, and that is to give the residents of West Coast settlements communication with the rest of the Island.

The vision of Mr. N. S. Loughheed, the Minister of Public Works, has been demonstrated many times in his handling of road traffic requirements during the eighteen months the present Government has been in office. The programme of his department for the future has been prepared on progressive lines. In that programme the needs of Vancouver Island have been given the most careful consideration, and there is hardly a doubt that an undertaking set in the forefront of what is proposed is the Sproat Lake-Tofino Road. In fact we do not doubt that construction will be actually commenced as soon as possible after the estimates of the Public Works Department are approved by the Legislature. The grade is an easy one; there are less construction difficulties ties than in many other parts of the Island: the distance is between thirty-five and forty miles. A territory that will be new to all but a few of our inhabitants will be opened up by the proposed highway, which will possess both scenic and commercial possibilities.

The residents of the West Coast have waited patiently for a long number of years to secure such transportation facilities as will advance their prosperity. They are now on the eve of getting an outlet by land to the populated centres and the period of their semi-isolation is approaching an end. The road to Tofino is logically the first route for giving them highway transportation facilities. Other roads will follow, but in the meantime we hope that governmental attention will be concentrated on this undertaking until it is completed and the people at West Coast points given a facility which has been in such demand for so long. Those who know the recreational possibilities of the Long Beach area, which the new road will open up, predict a future of the highest promise for that locality as a resort. The Government will have done its part in providing the transportation facility. The making of Long Beach the pivot of attraction it should become will, therefore, in its initial stages at least, largely depend on other energies.

THE LATE CAPTAIN W. J. RANT

Deep regret will be felt in many quarters at the death of Captain W. J. Rant, who had been a resident of British Columbia for thirty-eight years and a worker in the advancement of the province for a long period of that time. Those who knew him recognized his ability and energies and the part he played as a factor in development. He was of the type that could not fail to attract an ever-widening circle of friendships. Irish by birth Captain Rant possessed the adventurous spirit and spent many years in the service of the Empire with the 13th Royal Lancers, retiring with the rank of Captain. His days of energy were, however, far from finished with the relinquishment of his army career for he came to British Columbia and soon afterwards entered the service of the Provincial Government with which he remained for several years, proving himself always thoroughly efficient in whatever duty he was assigned.

Captain Rant in the last few months of his life passed through the valley of the shadow of deep sorrow. The loss of his wife and a granddaughter drew a veil of grief over his latter days. With his passing an active and highly respected citizen of long standing is lost to the community. His two sons and six daughters who survive him have the deep sympathy of all who knew the late Captain Rant.

Labor members of the British Parliament are setting something in the nature of a precedent there by reading their speeches. It is a precedent in that so many members are adopting a practice which was looked upon with a good deal of disfavor in the past. A drawback is that speeches are longer and more diffuse. As well, they lack natural feeling and fervor, and whatever personal magnetism a speaker may possess cannot be evidenced in the mere enunciation of the written word. It would seem as if the days of oratory are passing all too swiftly.

Mr. Justice Rainey of Ontario says that a young man should respect his dead father's wishes. The statement, without qualification, will hardly bear the light of reason. If this principle of obedience had obtained back through the ages to the time of the cave-men, where and what would we be today?

The Ontario Government, says Premier Ferguson, needs no stimulation in helping out the unemployment situation. It is doing its duty in a condition of emergency, as the Federal Government and the rest of the provinces should be doing theirs.

A THREEPENNY BIT IN BLANK VERSE

(The following is taken from The Parish Magazine of St. Martin, Sherwood, Nottingham.)
I am threepenny bit.
I am not on speaking terms with the butcher.
I am too small to buy a pint of beer.
I am not large enough to purchase a box of chocolates.
A permanent wave won't look at me.
They won't let me in at the pictures.
I am hardly fit for a tip-and-bell, believe me.
When I go to Church on Sunday
I am considered some money.

Too much gravity argues a shallow mind.—Lavater.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

After thinking over the difference between Vancouver and Victoria as proclaimed in a triumphant tone of voice by a visitor from the carnivorous city on the Inlet, and looking over a Vancouver newspaper and noting the number of daily hold-ups and robberies, always with violence and occasionally with a murder thrown in for purposes of emphasis, we have reached the conclusion that the description as applied to Vancouver was not exactly correct. Vancouver should have been described as a predatory city, governed to a considerable extent by the ethics of the jungle.

We sometimes think the Victoria police force has a false conception in respect of some of its proper functions, that it acts too often on the assumption that it is a tax-collection agency rather than an agency for the prevention of crime and the punishment of confirmed offenders against law and order. Nevertheless the conditions which prevail here as compared with the conditions which prevail in other coast cities, while to a certain extent they may be due to the advantageous physical situation of the city, are a credit to the vigilance of our police and the efficiency with which they discharge their constabulary duties. Our police force has established a reputation as a terror to evildoers. More could hardly be expected of it.

The fact that Vancouver has attained the evil eminence of the most lawless city in Canada—the Chicago of the western hemisphere—cannot be entirely due to its disadvantageous situation as compared with Victoria. We have heard the lawlessness of Vancouver attributed to the fact of its being a big and growing city and the "dumping-off" place on the edge of a great continent. There are other big and growing cities in Canada, and large crowds are dumped off in them from trains and ships; but there would be no justification for calling Montreal or Toronto the Chicago of Canada. Vancouver is a central point for operations of the predatory human elements of the Dominion and of the coast because during a long period the law was loosely administered there and criminals were permitted to establish themselves there.

About a year ago Vancouver changed its administration. A new Mayor was elected and a new chief of police was appointed. The new chief of police was empowered to reform and enlarge his force and instructed to capture or disperse all predatory elements of the community. But the criminals appear to be securely entrenched, for they are still carrying on their warfare upon the law-abiding community, and the new police force appear to be just as impotent in dealing with them as the old police force. If the chief of police of Vancouver were to issue an order for the complete disarmament of the people of the city, and had power to enforce his order, pedestrians might go abroad by day and night without dread of being held by thugs and forced to contribute to the maintenance of predatory gangs.

But of course it is a harder job these days to disarm a potential murderer than to move resolutions calling for the disarmament of all the nations. What with the League of Nations Covenant, the Kellogg Peace Pact and the naval reduction conference now proceeding in London, we all trust there "shall be no more war" upon either a national or international scale, but still a state of war prevails in many nations. There is a state of war in Great Britain, with new elements in the community striving to overcome and keep down the old elements which long have ruled there. But the war in Britain is not a war of violence; it is a war of words and political tactics, which appears to be just as injurious in its effects upon the business of the country and upon the social relations of the people as a war of violence.

The United States is virtually a nation in arms. A member of Congress stated a few days ago that a state of civil war prevailed in his country. The conflict began with a difference of opinion upon the virtues of prohibition and the evils of indulgence in strong drink. Today the two antagonistic forces are maintaining their positions behind machine guns, sawed-off shot guns and pistols. The casualties which have resulted from this family conflict would be considered deplorable in any other country. They are hardly considered worthy of comment in the United States. Inoffensive and law-abiding citizens, with an occasional infant thrown in the balance for full measure, are shot down on suspicion of being engaged in the unlawful business of peddling liquor. The Federal administration upholds the drastic measures of its emissaries. It has decreed that shooting down a citizen going about his lawful business is not murder; it has announced that the war must be continued until the "noble experiment" is a pronounced success.

PUBLIC LIBRARY OFFICIALS

Sir.—While congratulating the Province of British Columbia and the Carnegie Foundation on the wisdom of their choice in appointing Miss Helen Stewart as director of the new library area, I should like to draw attention to the very able manner in which the present head of the public library, Miss Clay, has succeeded Miss Stewart, who, I think, succeeded Miss Water, that splendid character and nurse killed at Etaples, France, in the war.

When I first met Miss Mary Stewart she was with Messrs. Hubben, on Government Street, and after ten years' exile in Manitoba was a great joy to come into contact with so able a literary woman. Associated with her was Mrs. Danvers Osborn, wife of that very erudite and multitravelled Danvers Osborn, famous for her "Love Letters." Victoria is to be congratulated on its public library and principal, but it sadly needs more space.

FOREST CONSERVATION

Sir.—In his annual review of the work of his department, the Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, includes the following statement: "Unless the ravages of fire are very substantially reduced, there is certainly a very grave danger that the vast industries dependent on wood will be faced with a serious shortage of raw materials."

"The situation is aggravated by destructive methods of exploitation, which not only operate without thought of a second crop, but by leaving enormous areas of undisturbed slash, intensifying the fire hazard, and in many cases give rise to conditions under which fire control during abnormally dry periods is well nigh an impossibility. Certainly the whole question of forest fire protection is one with which Canada must cope much more effectively than in the past, and to permit of proper review of the situation, it is my intention to call a conference with the Provinces on this matter early in 1930."

This statement not only vindicates my oft-repeated contention that no real hazard could be made in the direction of forest conservation until a regulation requiring the disposal of slash and cutting debris generally is made obligatory upon those who are utilizing our forests. It is gratifying in that it supports the calling of an interprovincial conference on the general subject of forest conservation, a course I have long urged.

Coupled with the provision for the disposal of slash, an agreement to reduce the volume of wood cut from the Crown lands is equally important. If this is done it will provide a market in Canada at fair prices for every cord of settlers' wood now being exported, as the domestic consumers will then be compelled to buy it in order to obtain a sufficient supply to operate their plants. Today the farmer and settler receive nothing for their trees, being paid in many cases barely sufficient to cover the cost of the labor employed in cutting and hauling the wood. The Government at Ottawa is to be congratulated for this.

This Week's Great Day

RORKE'S DRIFT

On January 22nd, 1879, Rorke's Drift in Zululand was the scene of one of the most magnificent feats in the history of the British Army. Early in the month a British expedition, led by the intrepid Rorke, landed for the purpose of punishing Cetewayo, the Zulu chieftain, who had been setting the authority of the imperial Government at defiance ever since the annexation of the Transvaal two years before. A hospital and a commissariat camp was established on the Tugela River at a spot known as Rorke's Drift, and when the main army moved on a small detachment of eighty-two men was left behind in charge of the camp, which consisted of two undefended houses, one of which was in use as a hospital for thirty-nine sick and wounded soldiers.

At three o'clock in the afternoon of January 22nd a couple of messengers arrived at the camp with the news that a body of 1,300 British troops had been massacred at Isandula by an army of more than 20,000 Zulus, which was marching rapidly in the direction of Rorke's Drift. Lieutenant Chard and Bromhead, who were in command of the garrison, at once hastened to improvise some protection for the camp, but the moment they could do was to take a few loopholes in the walls of the two frail buildings, and to surround them with a flimsy barricade, which was mainly composed of army wagons, mealie bags and biscuit tins.

An hour-and-a-half later an advance party of about 400 Zulus appeared in the camp, and in spite of a withering fire from the defenders, they succeeded in advancing to within fifty yards of the barricade before their rush was checked, when they were forced to beat a retreat and take cover behind some adjacent rocks. Every minute the army was reinforced with new arrivals, and in a short time the camp was completely surrounded by an army of more than 3,000 blood-thirsty savages.

Attack after attack was beaten off, but on six occasions the Zulus succeeded in forcing their way through the barricade and were only repulsed after spells of desperate hand-to-hand fighting, in which the defenders were outnumbered by nearly forty to one. Eventually the savage warriors stormed and set fire to the hospital, and while the sick men were being removed from the burning building a little band of heroes defended the place, room by room, until nearly all the helpless inmates had been carried out to hastily improvised shelter, but a few unfortunate men had to be left to their fate.

The unequal fight raged throughout the night, and at four o'clock in the morning, when the garrison was about to make a final stand in a redoubt composed of two piles of mealie bags, the Zulus suddenly retired and disappeared over the neighbouring hills. The exhausted garrison, which had been fighting strenuously without a break for more than twelve hours, did not dare to take a much-needed rest, but at once commenced to rebuild the barricade, so as to be ready for a renewal of hostilities. At seven o'clock another large party of Zulus appeared in the distance, but the timely arrival of a strong force of British troops caused them to beat a retreat, and the gallant fight at Rorke's Drift was over. The Zulus left more than 350 dead around the camp, and are believed to have carried away as many more, but the casualties of the heroic little garrison amounted to only fifteen killed and twelve wounded. Jots From Geography highly commended for its decision to call a conference, as are the Provincial Governments who have signified their hearty approval of the proposal.

TEMPLE OF Kulkulkan, in Yucatan, is the work of a Mayan civilization that existed in the fifth and sixth centuries. The temple is situated on a majestic pyramid that rises 100 feet above the ground. The inscriptions and art relics left by these aboriginals give proof of their genius in mathematics, astronomy and other of the abstract sciences. Perhaps the only contemporaries that equaled them were the Incas.

With regard to the price of paper, I can only say that I have devoted more time and thought to the study of forest conditions and forest supplies on this continent than perhaps any other individual, and that I have no hesitation in saying that, based on the remaining supply of raw material, the real danger that confronts newspaper publishers is not so much a question of higher prices for paper but a question of paper at any price. If the publishers carry their present policy to the extent of eliminating the smaller and higher cost production units, as they seem bent on doing, it is a foregone conclusion that newspaper will sell for $75 or more per ton within the next three years. The publisher, therefore, is confronted with two conditions, neither of which he is doing anything to ameliorate, namely, a shortage of paper-making material and a reduction of output which will force augmented prices.

I hold no brief for the paper manufacturers and I do not own a single share of paper stock. If it were not for the large number of innocent investors, some of whom perhaps have all their money tied up in paper securities, I would personally like to see the output of our wood-using industries very materially curtailed. In such circumstances we might at least continue to foster and hold our tourist trade and protect our agricultural interests. For fear in mind that when our forests are gone it will be at the expense of not only our wood-using industries but also of our agricultural output and our attractions for tourists.

It is significant that the value of our tourist trade is today greater than that of our newspaper output, extensive as that is.

In the same report above referred to, the Minister of the Interior speaks of the fire losses of the past year as follows: "Viewing Canada as a whole the fire season of 1929 was perhaps the most severe ever experienced in the annals of this country."

I think I can say without egotism that had it not been for the extra forest fire fighting force and equipment on hand at the time, an improvement brought about quite largely through my strenuous campaign for forest conservation, the fire losses referred to would have been incalculably larger than they proved to be.

If my humble efforts have been the means of saving at least a portion of our forests and of stimulating reforms for still further reducing our annual forest destruction, I shall feel amply repaid for a long, arduous, and sometimes in the past, almost discouraging campaign.

THE MAGNET
Just like the potent wizardry
In the magnetic steel,
There is a human quality
Which makes its sure appeal.
We see the metal shavings fall,
When comes the magnet's call,
It draws them by some subtle tie,
Some kinship binds them all.
And so this force abiding there,
Deep in the human soul,
Is kin to all things good and fair,
All virtues can control.
In hours of storm that each life knows
This power, strangely, mightier grows,
Through tempest and through gale,
Thrice-blessed the man whose being keeps,
God-given, from above,
This force which never fails or sleeps,
The master-magnet, Love!

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE AT TRAIL'S END

"Coolgarde" Smith Had Followed the Gold Lure in Three Continents—Had Great Faith in Province

BOXED IN DAWSON DURING EARLY DAYS

With the passing of Mr. A. Erskine Smith, or "Coolgarde" Smith as he was familiarly known throughout British Columbia, the West lost one of its picturesque characters. Born in Launceston, Australia, in 1867, he was in his sixty-third year when he died on New Year's Day last. His was a colorful and adventurous career. He earned the sobriquet of "Coolgarde" because of his exploits in the great gold district of Australia. It suggests the glamour of the mining camp and the lure of the long trails to the distant diggings. Three continents knew him. It was at Johannesburg, in South Africa, that he won his light-heavyweight boxing championship, and he was in that country at the time of the Jamieson Raid.

Coming to British Columbia in 1897, the lure of gold took him north, and in 1898 he was among the first of the argonauts to test the perils of the Northland beyond the summit of the Chilkoot. It is said he was one of the first to essay the passage of the treacherous White Horse rapids in a grow roughly thrown together. The safe passage of Smith and his companions was the forerunner of many like attempts, not all of which were successful.

The Klondike, although it furnished him with considerable romance, gave him little else. He was not of the fortunate ones that returned wealthy, but he made the acquaintance of Frank Slavin and Frank Gotch, and was a principal in a number of boxing contests in Dawson, where he made a reputation as a boxer of no mean ability.

Mr. Smith had great faith in the mineral possibilities of British Columbia. He gave a lot of attention to the Portland Canal section, and developed several properties in that area. At the time of his death he had just successfully completed the organization of a syndicate for the purpose of developing a highly promising prospect.

In his "History of British Columbia," Judge Howay says: "Mr. Smith is public-spirited and progressive in the best sense of the word and gives his support to all measures which have for their object commercial expansion of the upbuilding of the community. His standing in the business fraternity of Vancouver is of the highest."

MR. LAURENCE C. TOMBS, M.A. of Montreal, who has been appointed an International Officer in the Transit and Communications Section of the Secretariat of the League of Nations at Geneva.

After residing in and about the city of Victoria for some forty-four years, Mrs. J. R. Carmichael, of 2070 Carrick Street, passed away at the Royal Jubilee Hospital yesterday. BRIGANDS FILL PRISONS

Prisons of Albania are reported to be filled with "gentlemen" brigands and the country a brigand country. To take to the mountains and become a highwayman is born in the blood, and although brigandage is punishable by imprisonment there is no shame attached to the crime. As the result of wholesale arrests brigands fill the prisons, and, according to Albanians, all brigands are gentlemen.

FUNERAL TO BE HELD TOMORROW

Lieut.-Col. Claude Moss passed away at his residence, Cowichan Station, Monday morning. His death came very suddenly, his illness lasting barely an hour, and was a great shock to the whole district where he had lived for the past twenty-one years.

The fourth son of the late Thomas Moss, East India Company, Colonel Moss was born at Agra in 1859 and like his brothers was destined for the army from boyhood, his father having fought in the Indian Mutiny. Educated at Cowley, Oxford, and St. Peter's, York, Colonel Moss entered the Gloucestershire Regiment and served with the 61st Regiment in India for eighteen years, acting as adjutant and holding various staff appointments with much distinction.

A keen polo player, he played No. 1 with the regimental team which won the All-India Cup for infantry at Lucknow in 1892.

SOUTH AFRICAN VETERAN

He returned to England in 1899, where he acted as brigade major at Aldershot, which position he held on the outbreak of the South African War. Sailing for Africa in December, 1899, he took part with his regiment in the relief of Kimberley, Paardeberg, Driefontein, marched with Lord Roberts into Bloemfontein and served in the Transvaal.

For the next two years he took an active part in the guerrilla warfare, holding important staff appointments, and when peace was declared in 1901, he was D.A.G. at Bloemfontein on the staff of General Stephenson, and later on that of General Broadwood.

His war services were rewarded by the Queen's Medal with four bars and the King's with two bars. Retiring under the age clause as a major he returned to England and eventually came to Canada in 1908.

IN GREAT WAR

On the outbreak of the Great War, he offered his services to the army, but received no reply from Ottawa. Turning to England, his services were accepted by Lord Kitchener and he served in the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and during the Winter of 1914 commanded the 6th Service Battalion, South Lancashire Regiment at Tidworth. He was promoted by serious illness from taking his battalion to Gallipoli, and was transferred to the 14th Battalion, Cheshire Regiment. In 1915 he was sent to France to take part in the war and returned to England to undertake intensive training duties with Kitchener's Army. In 1917 he was sent to Italy and was given command of the reinforcement.

Why Do Cats Purr?

Familiar Sound of Cats "Bubbling With Happiness" Is Seriously Considered

The New York World has raised a question of profound interest—having nothing whatever to do with politics, according to an editorial in the Portland Oregonian. How does a cat purr? Such is the inquiry The World launches upon a planet that heretofore has been accustomed to taking a cat's purring very much for granted. It is evident that our more serious thinkers have worked enough to do at home without faring into the fourth dimension or reading Einstein or helping Johnny with his algebra. Neglected opportunities for earnest cogitation exist all around us, attractive, alluring, and we have been passing them by without recognition or interest. For an instance, how does a cat purr?

It was easy enough to evade this inquiry by the well-worn expedient of substituting why for how. This would be adroit but unprincipled. One might enumerate a long list of influences that cause a cat to purr: the hand of affection, the warmth of fire, the savor of food, the happiness of life, the pleasantness of day dreams—without advancing the investigation by a single step. It is in this inquiry that the cat purr is a most interesting phenomenon, so lightly passed by the savants. But whatever the cause of the purr, it is a sound that can be heard in the most unlikely places. It is a sound that can be heard in the most unlikely places. It is a sound that can be heard in the most unlikely places.

The World goes carefully into the matter, rejecting, after a moment's reflection, the theory that breathing has aught to do with it, since it is manifest that a cat may and does stop purring without ceasing to breathe. Moreover the purr is sustained and continuous, as could not well be the case with breathing. As The World truly declares, it keeps right on going, unless you pull the cat's tail, whereupon it ceases, the cat affording an excellent representation of rage or hauteur or offended dignity. Baffled at every turn of the problem, The World can only conclude that the cat has "some kind of revolving mechanism inside him that keeps turning around and around." This isn't wide from the truth, as we see it, only the fact is that the cat's purr is a sound that can be heard in the most unlikely places. It is a sound that can be heard in the most unlikely places. It is a sound that can be heard in the most unlikely places.

WOMEN HELPED MUSICAL GENIUS

MRS. WINNIFRED STEVENS ADDRESSES WOMEN'S CANADIAN CLUB

Story Shows Place Which Theresa von Brunswick Played as Beethoven's Inspiration

Under the attractive title "Women Who Have Influenced Great Composers," Mrs. Winnifred Stevens, of New Westminster, gave a lecture yesterday afternoon to the members of the Women's Canadian Club, which offered one of the few romantic subjects discussed under the auspices of the society here. Mrs. Stevens made her theme very attractive, and her clear, sympathetic and lucid delivery enhanced its charm. An old friend of the club, Mrs. M. R. Pearson, moved the vote of thanks at the conclusion of the address, and Mrs. P. B. Scourah, the president, presented Mrs. Stevens with a corsage bouquet.

The "Great Composers" included in Mrs. Stevens' survey were all of the classical group, Mozart, Wagner, Beethoven, Schumann, Chopin and Mendelssohn, some of the romantic attachments of each of whom were brought to light for the purpose of showing how greatly creative musical genius seems dependent on the inspiration of sentiment. Constantine Weber's influence on Mozart formed the first subject. Constantine, although not beautiful and although a failure as a housekeeper, proved a perfect helpmeet for his husband, tending him sympathetically during the helpless periods when the mood for composition was upon him, and furnishing just the appropriate kind of simple diversions which he needed. In the eyes of the world she might seem a hopeless failure because of the palpable mismanagement of the Mozart household affairs, but as the wife of a man of genius she was a great success.

Minna Wagner, on the other hand, was a marvelous housekeeper, but never during all her lifetime did she appear to the genius of her husband. Wagner was too great a man to write for the public, and therefore there was misery and penury in the Wagner household. Minna saved and scrimped to offset this and keep up appearances according to her rigid ideas of housewifery.

LITTLE UNDERSTOOD Minna so little understood her husband's gift that she once asked a friend to assist a genius as people said, and if so why he could not make money. They separated. Years later, when Wagner became ill, she went back and nursed him, and his relationship went back to the old note of misunderstanding again. "Little Minna was an exquisite little square peg in an inexorably round hole," commented the lecturer. Wagner's second wife, Cosima, a daughter of Liszt, brought up in an atmosphere of inspiration and music, although not herself a musician, proved a perfect companion, and so perfectly understood Wagner and his work that years after his death she was sought her to ask what the great composer's intentions were concerning such and such a passage.

The tragic, sad life of "the great composer who ever lived," Beethoven, was shown to have had his compensations. A man of passionate temper as well as passionate romantic emotions, he never married. An important place in his life and strongly influenced him and his work. The best-known of his women friends was Giulietta Guiccardi, to whom he dedicated his Moonlight Sonata. But the chief influence in his life was Theresa von Brunswick, the inspiration of his Sonata Opus 78, and her brother, Franz von Brunswick, to whom he dedicated his "Appassionata." Theresa was a pupil of Beethoven's, and secretly gave him her heart. Their engagement lasted four years, but was broken off by Beethoven himself when he learned of her growing deafness and the unsuitability of her marriage with one so poor. Even in his grandest works, even in his most tragic, the note of sweetness appears, reflecting the sweetness which pervaded even the gloomiest hours of his life.

Schubert's great inspiration was Caroline von Esterhazy, "whose name would be forgotten and unknown today were it not for Schubert's love for and devotion to her," noted Mrs. Stevens. Caroline, who was a titled lady, had vanity but so appreciation of Schubert's genius. Once she asked him why he did not dedicate something to her. His answer was that it would be no use, since everything he wrote was dedicated to her.

THE PERFECT LOVERS

In great contrast to the plain, awkward, shy, clumsy-handed and impecunious Schubert, so unfortunate in his one love affair, was Schumann. The charming romance of the Schumanns, "the perfect lovers," was well told. Clara Wieck, whom he married, he met when she was a musical prodigy of nine and he a young law student at that time interested in music only as a dilettante. By the time Clara was fourteen they were in love, Schumann meantime having turned his attention seriously to musical composition. Through an invention which he made for assisting his refractory fourth finger, he permanently injured his hand and on Clara devolved the responsibility, thereafter, of bringing his music before the world. It was largely to her genius as a pianist that Schubert owed his popularity as a composer.

The unhappy influence exercised by George Sand on the gentle, sensitive and effeminate Chopin was described. When Chopin first met this "corset" he had had her, but she, realizing this, deliberately used all her charms to capture him. Their friendship, which lasted over eight happy years, left a bitter taste with Chopin. Much of this emotional agony is reflected in his music, and it is generally supposed that what he suffered during this time hastened his death. In Chopin's case, too, there was a happier feminine influence, his love for Delphine Potocka, a Polish lady who was with him when he died, being the lasting romance of his life.

Yet, to be polite,
SHE SAID:
"It's nice to have you here, Ruth"

Charming—yet unwelcome . . . can it be "B.O."?

"I don't enjoy Alice Cole's bridge," Ruth was thinking some weeks later. "But she's never asked me again." "Same old story—people like me at first—but quickly lose interest." Then Ruth began to suspect the trouble. Read what she learned about "B.O."

"I'd never believe a person could be guilty of body odour—and not know it—except that it happened to me." "B.O." fools us like that, my doctor explained, because we become insensitive to familiar odours. But even on cool days the pores give off as much as a quart of odour-causing waste.

"But can we do nothing?" Mary cried.

Cramish looked rather sadly at her. "I simply advise you and all the others, Miss Glenne, to do as I am about to do. I am instructing my solicitors to put in a claim on the estate. There may be a composition. It may only be small. But at least it will be better than nothing. I am advised that there is a possible offer of twenty thousand pounds for the half-finished factory and ground. We may," she paused to smile bitterly, "possibly get a dividend of two shillings in the pound."

General dismay followed his announcement. Mary was thunderstruck; Merton did his best to comfort her. The others crowded round Cramish and talked fourteen to the dozen.

"Then poor dad is ruined," said Mary to Clive in a piteous tone. "Do let me help!" said he softly. "One never knows what will happen. May I suggest it to your father?"

She shook her head. "No. We must stand on our own feet." "Lord Cramish's voice was heard again. 'It's no good taking. I have said my last word, gentlemen. The whole proposition is hopeless, but unless the liquidator possesses some information, we must accept the situation. By the way, lunch will be served in half an hour. If any of you care to stay for it you will be welcome.'"

Andrews, Smith and Major Brown stayed. Colper said good-bye carelessly and stalked out like an ice man. Merton excused himself on account of Mary's father, and Cramish bade farewell to them both in friendly fashion.

"Cheer up, Miss Glenne," he said. "We must hope that something will turn up."

When they were driving back to town, Merton was silent for a while, and looked uneasy. Mary was wrapped in her own miserable thoughts. She did not know how she was going to face her father. All her hopes had gone. They must sell the house. The thought of her father in rooms appalled her. He was not complaining, but when he had had bouts in his illness he needed a great deal of both comfort and attention.

She heard Clive Merton's voice suddenly, low and rather uncertain. "Mary, there is one way out. Don't laugh at me! I mean it. It will be the happiest of ways for me."

"Don't!" she said, blushing vividly. "But I must. When I saw you first I knew it would come to this with me. What does it matter if it comes now? Waiting won't make any difference to my feelings. I love you now. I wonder if you will mean to say, have I a chance?"

"You see, there's your father. We could see that he was alright. I lost over this business, but I can still keep going fairly well."

"Please!" she said. "It isn't only that. It isn't pity because you two have taken such an ugly knock. Good heavens, Mary, do you think I would marry any one for pity? I mean to ask you when the corner was turned. There isn't any corner to turn now."

"I couldn't marry you now, Clive," she murmured.

"Why not?" he cried. "Let's be sensible, though I really don't feel a bit sensible, and this confounded car prevents me from showing you what I feel, darling."

"I couldn't!" she cried. "Not now! Not when we are like this. It wouldn't be fair to you."

"Then you would if all went right?" he said.

She colored up again. "What is the use of talking of it, Clive?"

"A great deal," he said. "The road at this point was deserted. He put on the brakes and took her in his arms, kissing her face and hair. But her face was cold, and she did not return his caress, though she made no attempt to restrain him. He stopped and sat back in his seat to regard her ruefully."

"Don't you love me at all, Mary?" he asked in an insistent whisper. Suddenly she took up one of his hands and pressed it to her lips. "So much, Clive," she said.

He took her in his arms again, but she would not yield. Then a car came in sight and he released her and started his own car once more.

"Take notice that we are engaged!" he said. "I'm engaged to you at least, and all your fighting won't stop that."

She smiled sadly as she adjusted her hat. "Poor Clive! Poor me!" she said softly. "But it's no good, old boy."

Clive drove fast. "That's all you know! I'm going to get my affairs in order, dispose of some odd lumber that will bring in money, and then your father is going to hear about it. At the present time I have the equivalent of about forty thousand capital, if I include my boat. That's good enough for three, not to speak of two."

"I wouldn't marry anyone for money, Clive."

"Nor would I, so this is my chance," he said. "You wouldn't marry anyone for his money; you wouldn't."

"When baby was three days old he started to break out with eczema. It began with very small pimples which later became red and broke and then scaled over. When he was twelve days old he was almost entirely covered with eruptions. The affected parts seemed to itch and burn so that I had to keep mittens on his hands to prevent him scratching his face."

"My mother advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. He seemed to get relief after the first treatment, and in two months he was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Sam Speers, Innisfree, Alberta.

Hudson's Bay Company Shows Sample of First Wheat Shipped From Winnipeg by New Route

RECALLS EARLY WESTERN HISTORY

A sample of Canadian wheat, 1929 crop, part of the first shipment by the new route from the Prairies via Hudson Bay to United Kingdom, is at present on display in one of the windows of Hudson's Bay Company's store.

This shipment, prepared by Messrs. James Richardson & Sons, Limited, of Winnipeg, was made possible by the courtesy of the Hon. Charles Dunning, Canadian Minister of Railways, Ottawa, who granted facilities for the use of the temporary rails as soon as they were laid to Churchill last September.

The permanent way, the terminal works, the docks and grain elevators are in course of construction and will all be ready for operation when the harbor works are completed in 1931.

For over 250 years the vessels of the Hudson's Bay Company have made their annual voyage from Great Britain to the shores of Hudson Bay.

The construction of a railway to the interior opens a new era in transportation to and from the Prairie provinces, and to mark this event the Hudson's Bay Company has transported this wheat from Winnipeg over the temporary rails of the Hudson Bay Railway to Churchill, thence overseas to Liverpool, where it was landed by the company's steamship Naosaple on October 11, 1929. The event will open a new chapter in the history of Churchill, so named in 1688 in honor of John Churchill, the first Duke of Marlborough, and governor of the Hudson's Bay Company from 1685 to 1691. The selection of the railway as the terminus of the railway adds interest to the following extracts from the company's records.

London Minute Book, 13th October, 1686: "Capt. Abraham late Governor at Port Nelson came before ye Committee acquainting yem of his proceedings yere & how he did ye last Spring sayle 50 Leagues Northward of Port Nelson & discovered there a fair River Ordered he bring in writing the said discovery."

London Minute Book, 8th February, 1688: "This Committee doe resolve and agree as followeth That Churchill River be Settled this yeare with a good Ship, a Competent Cargo for Trade and Materials for White Whale Fisheries."

Churchill Report of Chief Factor Thos. Stayer, 1797: "The harbour of Churchill is the finest in the Bay for the Ship, and where her Cargo could be the soonest discharged."

It is interesting, too, to note that Hudson's Bay Company was the first to ship goods from England to Winnipeg by the same route, a consignment of Hudson's Bay "Point" Blankets having been shipped to Churchill and from thence to Winnipeg via the Hudson Bay Railway.

Blaze Destroyed Princeton Hotel On Monday Night

PRINCETON, B.C., Jan. 21.—The Similkameen Hotel here was completely destroyed on Monday night by a fire that for a time imperiled the old court house, the new $30,000 court house still under construction, the garage of Burr Motors, Ltd., the United Church and several other buildings. Volunteer firemen fought the flames in subzero weather, with frozen and inadequate apparatus.

It is understood that the proprietor, Mr. George Wardle, carried off $7,000 insurance. The hotel had thirty rooms, a restaurant and a beer parlor.

HON. T. A. CRERAR CHOSEN CANDIDATE

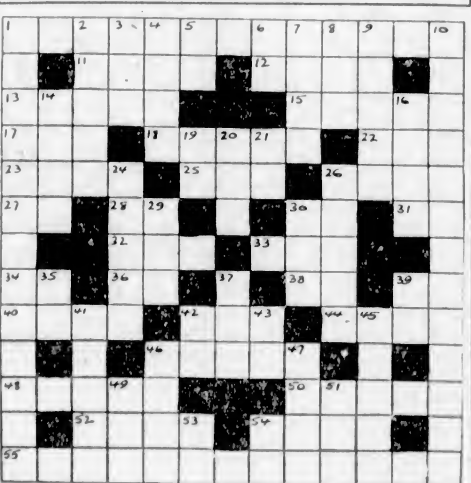

BRANDON, Man., Jan. 21.—Liberal and Progressive of Brandon constituency last night, joined in officially nominating Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Railways and Canals, in the Dominion Government, their candidate to contest the by-election here next month. The seat was made vacant by appointment to the Senate of Hon. Robert Forke, former Minister of Immigration, who represented Brandon in the House of Commons.

A portly woman of very elusive beauty was addressing a meeting on temperance reform.

"My friends," she said. "I had a husband who was addicted to the bottle. He was a great trial to me, but one day I persuaded him to take the pledge. He did so, and my joy was so great, so overwhelming, that I flung my arms around his neck and kissed him."

"And serve him jolly well right!" added a voice from the crowd.

34 Leading Doctors of Europe

FIND YEAST RESTORES "SICK" INTESTINES TO HEALTH

Greatest of all internal cleansers, it strikes at the root of 90% of common ills, they say

"SICK INTESTINES" . . . in this grave hidden danger doctors today are finding the key to fully 90 per cent of common ailments—to all those wearying, worrying ills that rob you of comfort, happiness, success.

Constipation may not alarm you—at first. But how quickly it steals vitality! Pulls you down. Leaves its damaging mark on body, face and mind, as day after day it floods your system with its depressing poisons.

Millions now refuse to put up with this condition. The world's greatest doctors have shown them it is unnecessary. For one simple, "every day" food, physicians have found, will do more to conquer the cause of this condition than all the cathartics, drugs and laxative pills you can buy!

Try it—now! Every day, regularly, eat 3 cakes of this great fresh food, Fleischmann's Yeast. Daily it softens the clogging food wastes, strengthens the weakened bowel muscles. Rich, new energy is your reward! And now, each cake is rich in two indispensable vitamins—vitamin B and the "sunshine" vitamin D. You can get it at grocers, restaurants, drug stores and soda fountains.

Just follow the simple directions on the label.

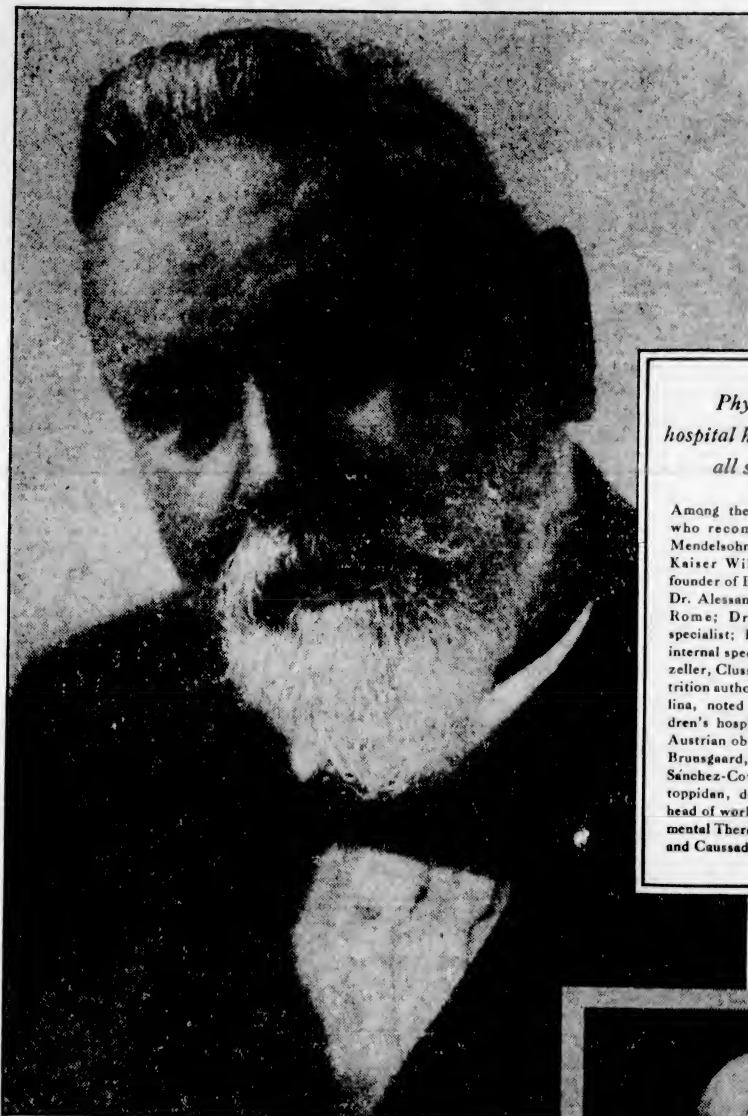

DR. GUSTAV SINGER, great internal specialist, is physician to the aristocracy of Vienna and has been decorated by kings. He says: "The best way to suppress intestinal poisons is the use of a good yeast. Its action causes constipation to disappear."

GRAND UFFICIALE PROFESSORE DOTTORE PIO PEDICONI, director of the important San Gallicano Hospital of Rome, declares: "Yeast keeps the system 'regular.' It stimulates the appetite and cures pimples and boils."

Physicians to royalty, hospital heads, noted specialists,
all say, "Eat Yeast"

Among the world-famous medical men who recommend fresh yeast are: Dr. Mendelsohn, physician to the sister of Kaiser Wilhelm I; Dr. von Noorden, founder of Europe's most exclusive clinic; Dr. Alessandrini, head of the hospitals of Rome; Dr. Delort, famous stomach specialist; Doctors Citron and Gerber, internal specialists; Doctors Grafe, Berozeller, Closs, Cherubini, and Begtrup, nutrition authorities; Doctors Pauchet, Catalina, noted surgeons; Dr. Reyher, children's hospital head; Dr. Bauer, brilliant Austrian obstetrician; Doctors Almkvist, Brungard, Gastou, Simon, Kromayer, Sanchez-Covisa, Brandweiner and Pontopidan, dermatologists; Dr. Neuberg, head of world-famous Institute of Experimental Therapy; Doctors Rosenthal, Lyon and Causade, famous medical writers.

(Above) "Teacher of half the doctors of Europe" is the title bestowed on Germany's great medical leader, GEHEIMRAT PROF. DR. FRIEDRICH KRAUS, long head of Berlin's most famous clinic. He says: "Constipation can injure the whole system. Yeast stimulates the intestines to normal action. Regular evacuations occur. Normal digestion is restored. Skin diseases are effectively combated."

Their doctors' advice brought thrilling new vigor and health!

(Above) "I had read what distinguished doctors say about yeast," writes Miss BETTY FRAKING of Cleveland. "My own doctor gave me the same advice . . . 'I had a bad case of constipation. And my complexion was surely nothing to brag about . . . Yeast did more to make me happy than all laxatives put together.'"

(Below) "At five Josephine won Canada's Jubilee Medal as a violin prodigy," writes Mrs. Blake of Toronto. "To keep her healthy in spite of many demands on her energy and the severity of the Canadian winters, I gave her yeast, which doctors had recommended to my husband. It corrected a poisoning of her system and built her up wonderfully."

(Above) "Ugly blotches covered my face," writes J. J. McLean from Toronto. "I was bothered with indigestion and took physics without avail . . . It was our family doctor who advised Fleischmann's Yeast. In only three weeks, the change in my health was remarkable. The skin blotches disappeared."

(Right) DR. GEORGES FAROY, physician associated with the leading hospitals of Paris, says: "Fresh yeast is a food—a living food. It increases the flow of digestive juices in the stomach and intestines and encourages digestion. It overcomes constipation. 'Irradiated,' it contains great quantities of the 'sunshine' vitamin D."

DR. GUSTAVO PITTALUGA, physician to the aristocracy of Spain, says, "Yeast has a tonic effect. It will banish constipation, renew appetite and aid digestion. It is abundant in vitamin B. When exposed to ultra-violet rays it also contains vitamin D, so necessary to keep bones and teeth strong and sound."

DR. EDWARD EHLERS, chief dermatologist of the Municipal Hospital, Copenhagen, is a skin specialist of international fame. He declares: "I invariably rely on yeast in all cases of rebellious acne, and for boils, in which its effect is astonishing and uncontested. The treatment should be continued until all poisons are eliminated."

The noted surgeon, DR. LOUIS DANTIGNIES, former President of the Society of Medicine of Paris, states: "Cathartics cannot be used often. A harmless yet active intestinal cleanser is required. Such a product is yeast. Yeast lays the foundation of intestinal cleanliness, which ensures mental health and bodily vigor."

Fighter Not Used to Being Hooded At

By AL DEMAREE

(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

Many fights have been won and lost under peculiar circumstances but it remained for Ed Smith, the old referee, to tell me how an oil once caused the defeat of a certain old-time fighter.

It was in the days when fighters and spectators had to play tag with the sheriff and stage their fight elsewhere they were reasonably safe. This particular fight was pulled off in the woods at night with kerosene lamps to light the ring.

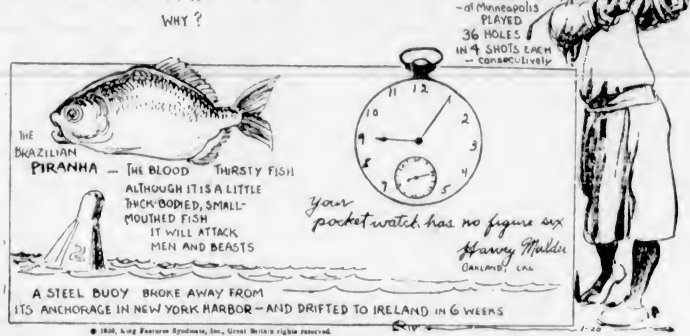

About the third round a large owl in a nearby tree became irritated at the light and noise and showed his displeasure by cutting a long ghost-like, spooky "Who-ooo!"

One of the fighters heard it and turned in terror to find out where the ghostly voice came from. His opponent was quick to take advantage and knocked him cold as a polar bear's nose.

Spectators and seconds shouting instructions have also caused fights to turn and lower their guard, leaving themselves open for a finishing blow.

EXPLANATION FOR YESTERDAY'S RIPLEY CARTOON
The Flying Snake—This suggestion came from the world's leading authority on snakes, Dr. Raymond Dittmar, of the New York Zoological Park. The snake is able to sail from tree to tree by flattening out its body, similar to the way a cobra flattens its neck when striking. Often the flying snake will also come down to the ground, sailing in spiral fashion. It is probably the most remarkable of all snakes, and is very rare, being found only in Borneo, Java, Malay and Sumatra. Attempts have been made to bring him to northern museums, but the snakes have died in transit. Its scientific name is Chryseola ornata. Please address all queries to Cartoonist Ripley, c/o King Features, New York City, N.Y.

HEAVYWEIGHTS TO APPEAR SATURDAY

Will Be First Mix With Big Boys Since Lohman-Miller Bout Twelve Months Ago

Local followers of the cauliflower pastime are going to get a glimpse of the big boys in action on Saturday when Ed Oman, Victoria heavyweight, steps four rounds or less, with rugged and hard hitting Bob Fraser of Seattle, in one of the preliminary bouts of the fastidiously staged at the Tullium gymnasium by the Central Boxing Club. Oman, former Simon-pure, who stole the spotlight of many previous amateur shows, is casting aside the robes of amateurism for those of the more lucrative professional bout. He has been training nightly for the coming mix and hopes to break into pro ranks with a victory. Fraser, who has been matched with the local fighter, packs plenty of socking power and is said to have stopped his last three opponents in quick time. All of which points to the interesting session which Oman will have. The bout marks the first heavyweight battle since the Lohman-Miller mix of more than a year ago.

The Pastore-Duffey four-round bout is arousing plenty of interest and for more reasons than one. Local fight fans remember how the former Bostonian chopped his way to victory over Pastore in their first meeting, only to have the latter reverse him in their recent battle at the Crystal Garden.

Saturday's mix is the "rubber" and with both of the boys fighting hard for the honors it should be a great mix.

Tickets may be procured at Two Jacks Dope, Empire Clear Stand and P. B. Richardson's, 736 Yates Street.

OUTSIDER WINS MIAMI FEATURE

Merlyn Knight, Leading Jockey, Brings Mount to Wire Through Field of Rough Riding

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The popular alk of the Texas-southern Thoroughbred was to take place between Mac and Mac versus Poux. In the opening game on the program, the "Mac" will meet the "Poux" in a women's "B" affair. For the past few years the Fiddis have swept everything before them, but so far this season they have failed to show their old form and meet occasional setbacks.

Y.M.C.A. strong aspirants for the men's "B" honors and one of the few teams in the City League that have yet to taste defeat in league games, will be out to continue its winning streak at the expense of Keating. The "Y" lads have a pretty quiet life and apparently are heading down the right trail towards the division championship.

Alan Le Marquand will handle all three games. The complete program follows: Men's "B"—Y.M.C.A. vs. Keating, 7:30 o'clock. Men's "B"—Y.M.C.A. vs. Keating, 8:15. Men's "B"—Y.M.C.A. vs. Keating, 8:45. Boiler, Tank and Engine Industry Is Making Progress in Canada

Production in this industry during the calendar year 1928 amounted to $5,507,437, which is an advance of 9 per cent over the total of $5,045,985 for 1927. In 1926, the total value of the output was $5,343,208. The 1928 production figures are the highest recorded since 1921, when production was valued at $6,980,170. Statistics recently issued cover the operations of all concerns which make boilers, tanks or engines as their principal products, but they do not include the production data for other industries that built these articles as a minor line. Thirty-five concerns reported in this group in 1928, distributed by provinces as follows: Ontario, 19; British Columbia, 8; and 4 each in Nova Scotia and Quebec. These firms had fixed and working capital amounting to $9,352,068. They gave employment to a monthly average of 1,752 people and paid during the year $2,393,200 in salaries and wages. Payments for materials purchased amounted to $3,228,497, and the value added by manufacturing processes was $3,278,940.

Among the commodities produced in the industry in 1928 were 536 power boilers rated at 42,453 horsepower and valued at $927,285; 358 heating boilers with a total rating of 21,090 horsepower, worth $362,971; 3,002 engines of all kinds with an aggregate rating of 14,491 horsepower, valued at $747,060; 6,130 storage and pressure tanks at $512,549; heating and ventilating equipment, $375,733; pulverized fuel equipment, $198,280; mining and metallurgical machinery, $175,709; pumps, $108,891, and many other lines, including safes, vaults and fittings; hydraulic turbines and water wheels; galvanized range boilers; structural steel; boats; smokestacks and smoke breaching, and castings.

Mary had been given threepence to buy lollies, and she bought some that Willie did not like. So she said to his mother, "Mother, is it wrong to say Amsterdam?"

"Well, my boy, that's a town in Holland."

"Then is it wrong to say Rotterdam?"

"No, that is another town in Holland."

"Well," said Willie, "I hope those lollies will Rotterdam teeth."

In illac time I told her of my love sublime.

"I wish that I could illac that."

Illinois Body Places Ban on Husky Mat Men

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—Heavyweight wrestling in Illinois was placed under ban indefinitely today. The Illinois State Athletic Commission gave the sport a stunning blow after failing to interest wrestlers of all factions to enter an elimination tournament proposed by the commission to decide the championship.

The commission decided to enforce the suspension of wrestling in the heavyweight division until such time as all championship contenders, or their representatives, appear before the commissioners and agree to satisfy conditions for an elimination tournament.

DAMAGES AWARDED

E. G. Bailey was awarded judgment for $106 as against the R. A. Green Lumber Company by Judge Lampan in the County Court, yesterday. A counterclaim for $135 was dismissed.

The claim arose out of a collision between a motor delivery van operated by the plaintiff and a motor truck operated by the defendant. Plaintiff claimed that the accident was caused by the excessive speed and lack of proper caution with which the defendant's car had been driven; and defendant claimed that the accident was caused by violation of the road regulations and hesitancy on the part of the plaintiff's driver.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

Evidence and argument by counsel were concluded yesterday in the County Court in the suit of Jameson Motors, Limited, against Dr. H. B. Maxwell, of Ladysmith, for some $300 claimed. Judge Lampan reserved judgment until today, Mr. H. A. Macleach, K.C., was counsel for the plaintiff and Mr. M. B. Jackson, K.C., for the defendant. Defendant admits the correctness of the counterclaim for a corresponding amount. It is the validity of the counterclaim that is in dispute.

An influential Frenchman was asked to get a young fellow a Government job. After some effort he reported that the Government had no jobs.

"But can't you get him something temporary?"

"I might get him in the Cabinet."

Coughed and Coughed Day And Night With Cold On Chest

Mrs. E. F. Shelton, Leader, Sask., writes: "I had a very severe cold on my chest and would cough and cough day and night, until I was nearly beside myself."

"I took all kinds of medicine, but nothing seemed to reach it. My druggist told me to take and see if that wouldn't help me. So I took home a bottle and from the first dose I could feel great relief, and by the time I had finished it my cough had completely disappeared."

Price, 35c a bottle; large family size 60c, at all druggists and dealers. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Delegates to Conference Express Their Views When King Opens First Meeting

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The text of Premier MacDonald's speech before the Naval Conference today follows:

"The gracious speech to which we have just listened, both conveys to you the hearty welcome of this country and also expresses the hope which the people of every nation share, that our labors here may be crowned with success."

CONGRATULATES KING

"It is particularly appropriate and is the cause of the most ardent satisfaction to us that this should be the occasion of His Majesty's first public speech since his recent illness. I venture to offer to him in your name our most hearty thanks and congratulations. Every country today, wealthy and poverty-stricken alike, feels the burden of arms, dreads their competitive development, doubts the value of the security they give and would like to escape from their influence and power. And yet, as has been shown again and again in the difficulties in the way are manifold. All, however, come principally from one source—a lack of confidence."

"The spirit of doubt, whispers 'there will be some state which will refuse to carry out its obligations to the community of peaceful states; do what we may a situation will arise one day when one of some kind will have to be faced and there will be but one remaining method—a fight.'"

HABIT OF MIND

"Thus a habit of mind nurtured by the experience of many generations controls our thinking and our actions, casts a shiver of hesitancy over all our peace efforts and prevents a great change in our attitude toward militarism as a means of national security. As a matter of fact the generations of experience which fears used to pen us up in spellbound fastnesses of military might, ought by their failure to enlighten us so that we break the spell and seek for peace and security by other means."

"That will come—how marvelously slow it has been. How easy it is to retard the progress of states when an old habit can be enlisted to fight enlightened reason."

WORLD IS WATCHING

"The whole world, it may be said, with almost literal accuracy, is turning its eyes upon us today. It expects that we shall deliberate and negotiate on the assumption that leaving put our names to a peace treaty means to respect our signatures. It prays that we shall not only relieve it of burdens but establish it still more secure in the ways of peace."

"It begs us to give public opinion a chance and to lift our programme out of the narrower scrutiny of the technical experts and to put it on the broader field of the creative statesman. Above all it demands from us an agreement to stop competition which recently has begun to show itself both in the type and the number of ships. If we are not careful we shall be once more involved in feverish competition such as heralded the outbreak of the war in 1914."

"At the same time if the conference and its work are to be judged justly some appreciation must be shown of the nature of its task. Since 1919 the security of peace has occupied much of the attention of nations and very considerable progress has been made. The League of Nations steadily builds up its authority and various clauses of its Covenant provide mutual security to well-doers and menaces to evil-doers among nations."

BULWARK AGAINST WAR

"The Peace Pact signed in Paris in 1928, which though lacking in machinery except that which the Covenant supplies for members of the League, is none the less a moral bulwark against war, and we never underestimate the effectiveness of moral bulwarks with no bayonets or bloodguilt behind them. The entry of the United States into the Permanent Court of International Justice, the growing confidence of the Court, and the increasing number of nations who have signed the optional clause mark definite and, I believe, irreversible steps in the displacement of military power by judicial process in the settlement of international disputes."

"Public servants like up will fail in our duty if we do not diminish military power in proportion to the increase of this political security. On the other hand no one can say that an absolute security for peace and justice yet has been found."

RISKS ENTAILLED

"There are risks on whichever side one leans, but I take it that the practical view is that political securities must determine the amount of military preparations. That excessive military resources is not only a waste of national resources but a weakening of political security; that military preparation that any one nation feels to be necessary at any given moment must be determined to a considerable degree by the military preparations of other nations, so that no nation is

No More Piles

Thousands Bless Dr. Leonhardt, the Specialist Who Discovered This Common Sense Remedy

If you think that the surgeon's knife is the only method of escape from the misery of piles, it's because you haven't heard of the new treatment known as Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

This Doctor's treatment is internal. By experimenting for years he discovered the exact cause of piles, and then went further and compounded a remedy that would remove the cause.

Dr. Leonhardt wants every sufferer to benefit by his discovery and so that there will be no doubting or delay, MacFarlane Drug Co., Vancouver Drug Co. and all druggists are authorized to sell HEM-ROID with guarantee that it will do as stated, or money back.

On that honorable basis every sufferer should secure a package of Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

free, except by international agreement, to pursue the policy of disarmament beyond certain rigidly defined limits. Steps toward disarmament must be international agreements; the agreements (whatsoever language is used or figures inserted) must remove the sense of menace from signatory nations."

This conference has therefore to value the securities now afforded to nations by the political guarantee mutually upon how far they can, on the assumption of a continuing peace, reduce arms."

PROBLEM OF SECURITY

"I dare to affirm that in the leading naval programmes there is a margin between real security needs and actual or projected strengths, and the world expects this conference to eliminate that margin."

"It will both smooth and shorten our work perhaps, if we assume two points in our discussions. The first is that we have different needs, posed upon us by geographical position, world responsibility and points of view in event of war."

"Confidence have broken down because there has been an unwillingness or an inability to understand that this is so; that therefore one is totally at odds with one's own use in ships for another purpose."

"I know that plea of 'need' can be stretched almost to the point that it lurks danger, but if peace is in our hearts and reduction of armaments in our minds the sublimity of what constitutes our 'needs' can be fairly admitted by each of us as regards the other and be satisfied in the form and provisions of an agreement, and the conference will be a conspicuous success."

PREMIER TARDIEU

Premier Andre Tardieu of France said in part: "Our undertaking in the limited task we are undertaking of the whole effort for disarmament. Our failure might postpone it for an indefinite period. Thus our responsibilities to the world, which we have accepted, will pass judgment on us, is clearly defined."

"The task is not an easy one. In our modern world, where rights, obligations and interests are so intricately mixed, the position of maritime states shows the greatest complexity. No mathematical formula will be equal to the solution of such a problem, for no formula will resist the pressure of life. This is why I felt so satisfied when a few minutes ago I heard the eminent Prime Minister of Great Britain declaring that to know and to understand another is our first duty and it is to bring into full light the respective needs of each."

"Our needs are determined, as Mr. MacDonald so justly observed, by our geographical positions, our historical positions, economic, maritime, colonial, political and defensive situations taken together, they define what is called a nation."

OUR STARTING POINTS

"We must take them as our starting points in order to find between the imperative duties imposed on us by security and the provisions required for its protection, the honest and sincere middle term, which will lead first to limitation and then to reduction of the heavy burden in present borne by mankind."

"It is necessary to add that the covenant of the League of Nations and the Briand-Kellogg Pact have considerably lessened the measure transformed our absolute needs into relative ones."

"Our present problem is how to move from the stage we have reached to the following stages. Against the follies of the past, we must now win the finest of victories: victory of the people, of goodwill. The weapon to win that victory is our faith, which will lead us to the necessary technical arrangements."

"In this capital of Great Britain, full of such historical memories, an inspired feeling of our traditions will fill us with proud resolution to go a step farther and give the world a greater measure of peace."

"Peace brings to us as her contribution to this work both her goodwill and her will. Gentlemen, let us be equal to the noble duty which our people expect us to do and which we are doing for the benefit of humanity if we approach it in a spirit of firm resolution."

SECRETARY STIMSON

Secretary Stimson, delegate for the United States, said in part: "We are profoundly impressed and moved by the significance of the speeches we have just heard," he said, "the cordial and hospitable welcome extended to us by His Majesty the King and the wise analysis of our problems which has been so movingly presented by the Prime Minister. I am so convinced that all members of this conference share the lofty idealism that has been expressed in the two preceding speeches that I look forward with confident hope to the success of our labors. I deem it an auspicious event that our first meeting at this conference in which there must be a spirit of understanding and co-operation should take place in the House of Parliament, which has for Americans a deep significance as the cradle of our jurisprudence and of our fundamental ideas of human liberty."

CONFERENCE NOT FINAL

"I feel it is important to emphasize the fact that we do not look upon this effort toward disarmament as a final process. We regard disarmament as a goal to be reached by successive steps of work for revision and improvement. Human affairs are not static, but are moving and, we believe, improving. A free and honest exchange of views, a resolution reported today, however perfect, may not respond to conditions at a later date. We sincerely hope the increased feeling of security may enable still more reductions in the future. For that reason we feel that the sound and obvious course is to reach such agreements as it may be possible now with the knowledge that they are open to revision at appropriate periods."

"We are convinced that in attacking now the naval problem we are following the practical and common-sense path. We believe that any solution which we can make of this problem will be a tangible contribution to the success of the wider problem of general disarmament. There is relationship between the land, sea and air force which constitute national defence. We believe that a limitation of any one of these will contribute to an enlightened limitation of the others."

THE ULTIMATE AIM

"While at the present the greatest contribution our country can make to the general cause of disarmament is in naval matters, still it must not be forgotten that our ultimate aim is a general solution of the disarmament problem and a consequent lessening of the risks of war. For that reason, however great the accomplishments of this conference in regard to the naval problem, our zeal in the general cause of disarmament and our efforts to contribute to the success of future endeavours of other fields will continue unabated."

"Our people demand of us a success; they recognize the disaster that a failure of this conference would bring to their dearest hopes and they are determined that we shall succeed."

JAPANESE PREMIER

Japan is prepared to go, in conjunction with the other nations, to the limit in naval disarmament. Reijiro Wakatsuki, the Japanese chief delegate, asserted in his address.

"She is ready," he said, "to effect not merely a limitation, but an actual reduction in naval strength, which she considers to be an appropriate and necessary programme for relieving the nations from onerous financial burdens."

Mr. Wakatsuki added that Japan's only concern was to keep the sense of national security of the people undisturbed by retaining such as is adequate for the defence of the empire, but not sufficient for offensive operations."

GREETINGS TO KING

"On this memorable occasion when His Majesty the King has graciously pleased to open the Naval Conference," he said, "it is my agreeable duty to express, on behalf of the Japanese people, their warmest gratitude for His Majesty's cordial message of welcome and good will, and our infinite pleasure at finding Him completely restored to good health. To His Britannic Majesty's Government, are due our sincere appreciation and esteem for the initiative in calling the present meeting, and the policies of each of the countries, hospitality and facilities which they are affording us in London."

JAPAN'S DESIRE

"It is the unanimous desire of the Japanese nation that peace should be lasting and established and the principle of international co-operation be firmly secured and upheld. They are convinced of the compelling need of eliminating the danger of sanguinary and wasteful warfare by enabling all nations to work in peace for their own development and the assurance of international fairness and justice. The intense interest manifested in Japan in the present conference is an eloquent sign of the pacific aspirations of our own country."

"I have every confidence that the powers here represented fully understand and are sympathetic with the attitudes and policies of each of the nations. Though not unaware of the delicacy and intricacies of the problems that confront us, I see no insuperable obstacles in our path."

SIGNOR GRANDI

Dino Grandi, Italian Foreign Minister in his address expressed hope that a solution would be found for difficulties facing world naval disarmament.

WANT TANGIBLE RESULTS

"The Fascist Government is desirous of securing real and tangible results in the fields of disarmament and security."

"The head of the Italian Government, Signor Mussolini, has laid down a vast programme of work for the progress of our country which requires a long period of peace for firm and to which the major resources and best energies of the Italian people are devoted. Italy desires nothing better than to carry out this programme in a peaceful Europe and a peaceful world."

"Let us hope this conference will lead to an agreement substantially reducing those huge naval credits which so heavily burden national resources. An agreement which will lead to a more equitable distribution of naval power, and a more equitable distribution of naval power, and a more equitable distribution of naval power."

Corns

Stop Hurting Instantly then Lift Right Off!

Drop "Freezone" on that aching corn. Instantly it stops hurting. Then shortly you lift the corn right off with the finger. You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit. Works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, and is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn and callouses. Try it!

make it possible to devote to work of peace much of the vast sums now expended in naval armaments."

COL. J. L. RALSTON

The speech of Col. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Minister of Defence, was as follows:

"For the Dominion of Canada, I humbly thank His Majesty for his gracious words of welcome. The eloquent words to which we have just listened have emphasized the satisfaction which is everywhere apparent, that His Majesty has honored and signally marked this occasion by his royal presence and his memorable and fitting speech."

"While His Majesty's proclamation is welcomed by all nations represented here, it is received by the nations of the Commonwealth with particular pleasure. Each has the separate sphere and authority; there is no subordination among ourselves, but the allegiance and loyalty which each bears to the Crown in the person of His Majesty supplies a living expression of the tie which unites this great Commonwealth."

UNITY OF RACES

"Let me say also that in no part of the Empire could there exist greater affection and loyalty to our sovereign than in Canada, where the descendants of two great races have, with those who come to the land from other shores, united to develop and preserve a nationality which relies for its harmony, its tolerance and its assurance of liberty on the freedom and security guaranteed by the British Crown."

"Canada comes here with no assumption of undue prominence or importance. She hopes particularly for the opportunity to be useful and helpful to those who will bear the burden of this great event. She is fully conscious that she is so situated as to be spared in some degree the anxiety which other nations experience regarding security. At the same time she has been ready to assume what she conceives to be her national responsibility and has shared in full measure with the nations of the world the bitter experiences of war."

IN WORLD AFFAIRS

"Our Dominion is in close accord with the development in world affairs to which you, Mr. Prime Minister, have referred, which looks not wholly towards armament for security, but also toward machinery which forestalls the necessity for force by disposing of differences on the basis of discussion and reason. If her experiences in this respect can be put to service in the deliberations of this conference, we gladly tender it for this purpose."

OTHER DELEGATES

Hon. J. E. Fenton, Australian Cabinet Minister and delegate, said that from Australia to London, and indeed from other interested countries, was a long way to come, but no sacrifice was too great when it was directed toward the object of international peace.

Hon. T. H. Wilford, High Commissioner in London, spoke for New Zealand; Hon. Charles T. Water, High Commissioner in London, for the Union of South Africa; Hon. T. A. Smiddy, High Commissioner in London, for the Irish Free State, and Sir A. Chatterjee, High Commissioner in London, for the Government of India.

In the estimation of Mr. J. Fyfe Wilson, president of the Victoria Radio Club, fully 25 per cent of owners of radio receiving sets listened to the broadcast.

Many went to bed in the evening and set their alarms for 2.40 o'clock in the morning, when His Majesty delivered his opening speech before the Five-Power Naval Conference.

The general consensus of opinion among broadcast listeners is that the related speech over KOMO at Seattle was louder than CNRV at Vancouver, although the Canadian station was received here with more clarity.

AT THE PLAYHOUSES

COLISEUM

The most lovably decorated cabaret in Hollywood was recently opened for six days and closed—but not through lack of patronage. The great night club interior forms one of the big sets for "The Singing Fool," the Al Jolson special, now showing at the Columbia Theatre.

PLAYHOUSE

"The River," now at Playhouse Theatre, Fox Movietone talking picture, tells the dramatic story of a girl who had been loved by a hundred men, but found there was only one who meant what he said. Dialogue sequences accentuate the drama in this fine production, which includes among its supporting cast Margaret Mann, Ivan Linow and Alfredo Sabato.

DOMINION

A peacock as a vain creature, as any other actor, are regular camera hounds, according to Al Green, who directed "Disraeli," the Vitaphone version of the famous stage play, produced by Warner Bros., with George Arliss starring, and now playing at the Dominion Theatre all this week. However, peacocks seem to be natural actors. Seated in the crowd of assistants and actors gathered behind the cameras at Busch Gardens in Pasadena, where the ex-lorials were filmed, the peacocks spread their feathers and strutted about before the cameras like real troupers.

COLUMBIA

Cecil B. DeMille's tremendous production of "The King of Kings," in which eighteen players of stellar ability and thousands of extras appear, will be on view at the Columbia Theatre for the last time today. The picture is beautiful, severe, charming and has been received with favor in this country and abroad. If B. Warner has the role of Jesus, and Jacqueline Logan is the Magdalene.

CAPITOL

The added fame that Warner Baxter has achieved since the inception of talking pictures has cost him part of his liberty while his productions are being filmed. To prove that it is a dangerous business to disclose hidden talents, Alfred Santell, director, saw to it that Baxter's gift was utilized in "Romance of Rio Grande," the Fox Movietone with music, showing at the Capitol Theatre all this week. Baxter is aided by a male chorus of forty voices in his singing debut in "Romance of Rio Grande."

VARIETY

A thrilling three-act theatre comedy-drama, athrob with heart interest, scintillating with laughter, is the offering of the talented Toby Leitch playing at the Variety Theatre tonight and all this week. Presented in a theatre kept cozy warm and comfortable, "The Banker, the Girl and the Thief" is an entirely charming evening's entertainment. Toby Leitch is cast in one of the roles for which he is famous. His brilliant comedy work is a constant source of laughter and delight. Spent-prover orchestra is again featured in a delightful musical presentation.

Comedy Thriller

"The Crooked Billet," produced by the Gordon McLeod English Players at the Royal Victoria Theatre on Monday night, will continue to fill the bill for the remainder of the week. This exciting comedy thriller, with its quaint scene of an old Kentish village inn, and its atmosphere of mystery from the rise of the curtain to its fall should attract Victoria audiences in great numbers, and judging from the Monday night house and its enthusiastic reception should more than do so.

The clever cast, all of whom are the same who delighted the public at Christmas with their presentation of "The Ringer," showed their versatility in "The Crooked Billet." Next week an amusing society comedy entitled "This Thing Called Love" will be offered at the same popular prices.

MEMBERS OF FRIENDLY HELP HEAR REPORTS

Rooms of Association Crowded When Officials Render Statements Covering Year's Activities

BANK BALANCE IS SUBSTANTIAL

In submitting her report for the year 1929 at the annual meeting yesterday afternoon, Miss Lawson, secretary-treasurer of the Friendly Help Association, stated that it had been a comparatively easy year, the demands on the association being lighter than usual on account of the betterment in the local employment situation. With the coming of the Fall and Winter months, there had been increased calls for assistance and these had all been met. The meeting brought out a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen interested in the work of the association, and members of the clergy and others spoke, doing much to encourage the active members on the good work they were accomplishing. Alderman Woodward, representing the City Council, stated that the members of the board were in sympathy with and appreciated what was being achieved, and if the sphere of the association's activities grew wider, and demands which could not be entirely met, resulted, the city would undoubtedly come to its assistance.

Mr. Thomas Menzies, superintendent of neglected children, spoke in praise of the visitors giving so freely of their time in studying conditions where need was evident. In referring to the Deserted Wives' Maintenance Act, Mr. Menzies asked what about the deserted husbands, who were left at times with a family of young children to take care of.

APPARENT INJUSTICE
Replying to a query from Mr. Woodward regarding the possibility of rectifying the apparent injustice of one municipality having to take care of indigent families from another municipality, Mr. Menzies suggested that the Legislature be approached.

Ex-Alderman Harvey regretted that the Mayor could not be present. He believed that, when it became necessary for the secretary of the association to retire, she should be able to come under the Superannuation Act. Replying to this, Mr. Menzies suggested that as the Friendly Help Association, it was only privileged to govern its own actions, and he pointed out that any officer in its employ could not be looked upon as an employee of the city. He suggested that the association might be able to provide for Miss Lawson's superannuation when the time arrived, and Mr. Woodward appreciated that the matter might be solved in this way.

Miss Crease spoke feelingly with regard to the maintenance of deserted wives and families of men who were locked up. She thought some means could be devised whereby prisoners would be paid wages, which their families would receive, and so be taken care of.

Assistance was promised the association by the Canadian Legion and the local Boy Scouts.

The election of officers for 1930 was deferred until the next monthly meeting.

The report of the secretary-treasurer, Miss Mary Lawson, showed that at the beginning of 1929, the association had a balance of $1,652.27 in the bank. Subscriptions from various sources had amounted, during the year, to $11,540.21, making a total of $13,192.48. Expenditures totaled $10,358.63, there being a balance of $2,833.85 to the credit of the association on December 31, 1929.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Mrs. Grant, first vice-president, who was in the chair, read the report of Mrs. Margaret Callum, president. She said the society appreciated the continued interest and co-operation of the Mayor and Council, and all other kind friends. "As the year goes by the spirit of our work continues to retain the interest and trust of the citizens of Victoria, and we feel our efforts to ameliorate distress whenever reported to us are carried out to the satisfaction of all. We make careful investigation and do our best to operate with all other organizations interested in charitable work. "We are pleased to report that most of the cases dealt with by our best to carry on whenever possible. We have some very sad cases, the aged and infirm, the families that suffer through the father being addicted to drink, and those that are deserted by the husband and father.

"At our December meeting a resolution was passed asking the Provincial Government to consider an amendment to Deserted Wives' Act. This act states that a man deserting his family can be apprehended and imprisoned, but there is no clause stating that such men must report regularly.

"Our secretary-treasurer, Miss Lawson, has reported cases to the provincial police; the man has been made to send part of his earnings, he would do so once or twice, and then stop.

"We feel that such an amendment would make it possible to carry out this act to the letter. This resolution has been endorsed by the local council of women, and a man to have it presented to the Government at this session of the Legislature.

"Once more we extend grateful thanks to the Mayor and Council, generous citizens, school children, Burns & Co. Ltd., Boy Scouts, doctors, and all others who have interest in the work of the Friendly Help Association. The Colonist and Times for their willingness to publish all reports and appeals we make to the public, also to Ismay, Bolton, and accounts, auditors.

"And lastly I would like to thank the visitors for their hearty co-operation and unselfish devotion to the work."

OCCASIONAL EMPLOYMENT
The recording secretary, Mrs. J. J. Pilgrim, reported:

"The year just closed was a busy one. The first two months many families were forced to apply for assistance owing to cold, winter weather.

"During the Summer months very few families applied, but we have cases where sickness and incapacity prevent the breadwinner from obtaining steady employment. The last two months of the year seen to bring renewed applications for help.

"We often wish it were possible for city work to be created, in this way giving men a chance to earn some money. Rent, water, light, etc., goes on, and food must be purchased. It is impossible to do this, having only occasional employment, as most of the cases we deal with are of that type.

"The total number of cases listed during 1929 was 383—165 of these being new cases. One hundred and sixty-seven families, father, mother and children, received assistance at intervals during the year, thirteen of these had clothing only.

"Fifteen deserted wives with children were taken care of. We hope the resolution regarding deserted wives, sent by this association to the Local Council of Women to be presented to the Provincial Government, will meet with favorable consideration.

"Thirty-four widows with children. Some of these received assistance while waiting for the Mother's Pension; others that do not come under benefit of this act.

"Thirty-nine couples. Sickness of breadwinner and wife unable to go out; some due to hard luck, some strangers stranded here after a month or two without work.

"One hundred lone men: Fifty-six of these being new cases, receiving clothing only. The others, elderly men not old enough to get pension, some not entitled to it; others cannot get into the Old Men's Home, others not able to work due to ill health.

"Fifty-five lone women: Elderly and not able to get regular employment. Whenever possible, we do our best to obtain benefits of social legislation for any of these cases.

"During the year 1,244 grocery orders were issued, 898 meat orders, 418 families received milk. Milk is often sent on advice of Medical Officer and V.O.N. Forty-seven tons of coal and fifty-three cords of wood were sent out, 187 winter fuel, 12 maa hampers were sent from the rooms; twenty-six names from our lists were given to other organizations, and they sent Christmas cheer to these families.

"The board wishes to express its gratitude to Messrs. J. Cox, J. O. Hall, the Hon. Lieutenant-Governor Bruce, and Miss Finlayson for donations of coal to help meet the great demand for fuel during the cold spell in January, 1929; to the kind friends in the city and vicinity, and our secretary-treasurer had several happy surprises during the Christmas season when she received cheques from interested friends holidaying abroad and sending their sincere wishes that the good work of the Friendly Help Association should continue to the anonymous donors who never fail to contribute to us that we have many friends, and we in turn, as our association's name implies, can be a friend in need to all worthy applicants.

"Giving and doing for somebody else—On this life's splendid depends. The real joy of life when it is all summed up Is, just, in the making of friends.

"In conclusion, we note with deep regret the passing of one of our charter members, Mrs. Baylender. She devoted years of unselfish service in this work and her memory will ever be dear to us. It is our privilege to have two of her daughters on our board: the president, Mrs. Culham, and Mrs. Sabiston. A tribute also to the late Mr. Alex. Virtue, a generous and interested contributor."

Driver Failed to Get Out of Way of Fire Department

Six drivers pleaded guilty to charges of violating the parking regulations and were fined in the city police court yesterday, before Magistrate George Jay.

V. E. Mayers pleaded guilty to a charge of permitting a motor vehicle driven by him to obstruct the passage of the fire department apparatus on Cook Street, thereby delaying a fire department car. He was warned of the obligation laid on drivers to clear the way for the fire department vehicles and of the serious results that might follow from neglect of this obligation. A fine of $10 was imposed.

August Christensen was fined $25 on pleading guilty to being intoxicated in a public place.

Six more Chinese appeared in court charged with assault on officers in connection with the small riot at a meeting on Sunday. They were remanded until Friday.

Chatterer's Little Joke

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A harmless joke played now and then is good for squirrels and for men. —Chatterer the Red Squirrel.

Farmer Brown's Boy was both surprised and disappointed when he found that there was nothing in the trap he had set for Chatterer the Red Squirrel. That is, there was nothing in it but the trap he had used for bait. The trap had been sprung and he had been sure that he had caught Chatterer. All the time Chatterer was hidden in the great pile of corn and was watching him, chuckling as he watched.

"I don't know how that little rascal sprung that trap without being caught," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "I'll try it again. He did it once, but I don't believe he can do it twice. He must have done it by accident."

So Farmer Brown's Boy once more set the boxtrap very carefully. As before, he baited it with nuts. He took great pains with the setting of it. You see, he meant to catch Chatterer if it were possible. The next morning when he looked at it, it was sprung again. As before, there was no one in it.

"You little scamp!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's Boy. "It must be that you climb up on this trap and so trip the trigger. I've got to think of some way of fixing it so that you can't do that."

Farmer Brown's Boy took the trap away and worked over it. That afternoon, when he brought it back to set it, he had fixed it so that that little stick that Chatterer had touched was protected. Chatterer couldn't touch it now. "Now," said Farmer Brown's Boy, "we'll see if you'll spring this trap this time."

Of course, Chatterer knew nothing about this until very early the next morning, when he visited the corncrib. The first thing he did was to look at that trap and, of course, he saw right away that he couldn't spring the trap as he had sprung it before. Chatterer sat down in front of that trap and studied it for a few minutes. Then he began to chuckle. If he couldn't spring that trap he could at least see to it that Farmer Brown's Boy should find something in it.

Chatterer picked up a bare corn-cob, one from which he had taken all the corn. He pushed it into the trap. Then he did the same thing with another. He hunted out a third and pushed that in. The fourth one was extra long. When he pushed that in it touched the trigger of the trap. Down came the door! It gave Chatterer a fright. Indeed, it came very near hitting him on the head. He jumped back in time. When he had recovered from his fright and once more looked at the trap, he chuckled more than ever.

"He'll find something this time," muttered Chatterer.

"He'll find something this time," muttered Chatterer. "Farmer Brown's Boy will find something this time. It won't be what he thinks it is, and I guess he'll be some surprised."

In this Chatterer was not disappointed. It was only a little later that Farmer Brown's Boy came in. He looked at once at the trap and, of course, he saw at once that the trap was sprung. He chuckled aloud.

"That's the time I fooled you, old fellow!" said he. "As they say in some places, I outsmarted you. You've had the joke on me several times, but now I've got it on you." He went over and picked up the trap. It was then that he discovered that the door was not quite down. There was the end of a corn-cob in the way. The instant he saw that bit of corn-cob he knew that once more the joke was on him after all. He opened the trap. There lay the four corn-cobs. Farmer Brown's Boy gave vent to a little whistle of surprise. Then he just had to laugh. He was enjoying Chatterer's little joke quite as much as was Chatterer himself.

Nation Thrills as Voice of King Is Heard Via Radio

ONE of the greatest thrills in radio history was made possible yesterday morning when the voice of His Majesty the King was heard over a nation-wide hook-up, when he opened the Naval Conference in London. The broadcast commenced promptly at 2:40 o'clock, when the announcer's voice from London came through clear and strong as he gave out the order in which the various delegates would speak.

Hundreds of Victoria enthusiasts heard this successful broadcast over the Canadian National Railway network station CNRV and also over station KOMO.

STUDENTS OBJECT TO RECRUITING

Trouble Occurs in Raising of Irish Free State Reserve Army

DUBLIN, Jan. 22.—Recruiting of the new volunteer reserve army of 50,000 men and officers for the Irish Free State is meeting, with considerable opposition.

So far most of the opposition has come from the "young intellectual" class and other Republicans, who vividly remember the late civil war and fear what they call a "military movement which may be used to break strikes or keep Irish citizens in subjection."

The authorities, political observers say, are handling the situation with tact. The work of organization is proceeding apace and will undoubtedly be an accomplished fact before long.

Most of the trouble so far has centered on the attempts to enroll National University students as officers in the new army. Some of it is undoubtedly sponsored by the secret, illegal Irish Republican Army, which is still in existence.

Exciting scenes took place at National University College when Free State Army officers appeared to enroll students in the Officers' Training Corps. A large number of students objected, the gist of their protest being, "It is not right that the university should be turned into a recruiting office."

After the speeches, the students rushed into the room where the army officers were enrolling applicants, and threw a number of "stink" bombs.

B. Ross as President

ARRANGEMENTS AS TO UNIFORM

CHEMANUS, Jan. 21.—The annual meeting of the local Girl Guide Association was held in the reading room of the Recreation Club on Monday. Ten members were present with the president, Mrs. R. B. Waldon, in the chair.

The financial statement was read and adopted. The reading of various reports followed. In the president's report, Mrs. Waldon reviewed the work of the year.

In September, the resignation of Mrs. C. D. B. Ross, guide captain, was received with regret. Mrs. R. B. Waldon, Guide Lieutenant, was promoted to the position of captain. With Miss Edna Fraser as lieutenant, Mrs. George Neale agreed to take the position of Brown Owl.

At the September meeting it was agreed that after five years' service the full uniform should be the property of a Guide, whether she transferred to another company or not. In closing, the president expressed her gratitude and appreciation of the kindness and help received from many members of the community.

The report of the First CheமானUS Girl Guide Company followed. Guides and second class Guides have attended meetings held at Duncan by Miss Denny and Miss Dawson. Thomas to obtain instruction in first-class subjects.

Mrs. George Neale, Brown Owl, reported steady progress in the Brown Owl pack. For the first part of the year Miss E. Greig had been in charge, assisted by Miss V. Porter.

SCIENCE ROBS LEPROSY OF SOME TERRORS

Health Service Bulletin Says New Methods of Treatment Offer Hope for Victims

FEWER CASES SO DIAGNOSED

(Special to The Colonist. Copyright, 1929.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Leprosy, one of the oldest diseases of which authentic medical knowledge is available, has been throughout history one of the least understood and most maligned, according to the United States Public Health Service. While it is said to be undoubtedly true that leprosy is an infectious, slightly contagious disease of unknown means of transmission, and while untreated and uncurable leprosy almost inevitably progress to repugnant pictures of suffering, it has remained for the last few decades to ally, to some extent, the terror which the word "leprosy" strikes to a neighborhood.

"Until comparatively recent years," says the service, "the apportionment, once a leper always a leper," was sufficient to quench all hope in the afflicted and to bring consternation to family, friends and community. Within a generation, however, improved therapeutic measures and more concentrated and rational considerations from scientists have led to the conclusion that the lot of a leper is not necessarily hopeless, and each year increasing numbers of patients are being discharged from leproseriums as "cured," or are paroled as no longer a menace to public health.

"As research has continued, a more nearly humane view is being taken of the relative danger of leprosy in a community. That some danger exists, must be admitted; for leprosy begets leprosy; that the danger justifies the terror which sometimes pervades a neighborhood upon the public announcement of the discovery of a leper cannot be admitted.

"Barely fifty years ago, the discovery of the causative agent of leprosy, the 'leprosy bacillus,' by the Norwegian scientist, G. Armauer Hansen, cleared the way of the removal, from the sufficiently evil name of leprosy, of a number of similar but essentially different diseases and the diagnosis of leprosy today is rarely made, even by an experienced physician, until the leprosy bacillus has been found in the suspected patient. Leprosy as it is now recognized differs in no important respect from true leprosy of centuries past, save that by differentiation from unrelated diseases a clearer conception of the disease has been obtained.

"That leprosy now exists on the North American continent and has existed here for a great many years is a truth which seldom occurs to the average person until newspaper headlines attract the attention of the community to some unfortunate person who is afflicted with the disease. Then, after a few days' hysterical attention to the subject, the question again drops into temporary oblivion.

Health and Diet Advice

THE LIDS AND THE LASHES

Real herpes zoster is more serious than mild herpes and begins with a violent, neuralgic pain shooting through the eye, lasting for a day or perhaps two, followed by an eruption on the upper lid which causes it to swell with a reddening. Fever is often present, and the eruption or blister penetrates more deeply than in mild herpes and often leaves small scars after healing. The best treatment seems to be the orange fast for several days accompanied by enemata morning and evening, and short, warm applications to the eyelids.

Sometimes the eyelids will not close, as in lagophthalmos of the eye which causes the lids to be continually open because of an inability to close them. This is serious, since the continual exposure to the dust brings on irritation followed by infection from which the eye may actually be endangered. A ptosis or drooping of the eyelid with no ability to lift it can sometimes be benefited by sinusoidal electric treatments, or if this is not helpful, surgery may have to be resorted to. A number of diseases, such as persistent acne or eczema, may spread to the eyelids from surrounding tissues and cause much discomfort. These diseases can usually be cured, however, when the correct constitutional treatment is used. No specific treatment seems to be required for the lids other than cleanliness. Where an escape of blood occurs into the tissues of the eyelids or the eye itself, as may occur during a cough or strain it is advisable to use ice or very cold packs as soon as possible until the hemorrhage has stopped.

A usual question of correspondents is "How can I make my eyelashes grow longer and more luxuriant?" To accomplish this, some people put on commercial eyelash growers that promise to make two little lashes grow where one grew before. These users may be disappointed in any quick growth but, the use of such creams persistently and over a long space of time, such as six months, does have a beautifying effect on the lashes. Still, others believe in clipping the lashes with scissors, holding that a bob of this sort encourages the lashes into growing into more attractive length. How disappointed they must be if the lashes do not grow.

Some people have naturally long and others naturally short lashes, and one cannot expect to produce any marked change in the natural tendency. Some improvement can take place with persistence, but a growth of hair on the body is never a rapid success; it takes weeks, and miracles should not be expected.

A treatment that has received favorable reports is to apply a thin line of sweet almond oil immediately above the upper eyelashes with a thin brush each night before retiring. The same treatment can be applied on the lower eyelashes. Gently pulling at the eyelashes also assists in their growth, but be careful not to pull hard enough to pull out the eyelashes. The action of the sun's rays seems to stimulate their growth, and it ought to be encouraging to remember that while you are taking a sunbath your lashes are getting a free beauty treatment. Lashes that are naturally white have no known cure, as the color has not been known to grow into them if it was left out in the first place. Those who darken the lashes should be careful not to allow the coloring material to enter the eyes.
